LBJ's Classmates Attend Bill Signing ... FOR $1 BILLION SCHOOL AID

Johnson City, Tex. (AP)—President Johnson signed the billion dollar school aid bill Sunday and said he believes it will mean more to the future of the nation than any law he'll ever approve.

The historic signing came in a nostalgic setting outdoors on the shady side of the one-room schoolhouse the President attended as a child.

With his old first-grade teacher and former classmates looking on, along with invited guests and tourists, the President sat at a vintage type school desk to affix his signature.

For Guests, Too Several other of the old-fashioned desks of the type used in school rooms years ago had been set up for other guests.

For Johnson, a one-time country school teacher himself, it was a moment and scene personally chosen.

The school house, some two miles from his ranch house, looks down on the lazy Pedernales River, where it isn't hard to imagine the school's youngsters years ago gazed and dreamed of sun perch and tadpoles.

Weather Good It was a bright, sunny day as the President signed the bill.

Johnson said the signing bridges the gap "between helplessness and hope for more than five million educationally deprived children."

"As President," Johnson said, "I believe deeply no law I have signed or will ever sign means more to the future of our nation."

Teacher Present Sitting beside the President as he signed the bill was the woman who taught him in the first grade. She was Miss Kate Dedrich at the time and she taught eight grades all at once, Johnson said.

Now she is Mrs. Chester Loney of Rough and Ready, Calif., and Johnson brought her here for the bill-signing ceremony.

Referring to "this little school of my childhood," Johnson asked his former teacher to sit beside him as he signed the bill.

"Miss Kate," he said as she did so, "they tell me I learned my first lessons sitting on your lap."

House Majority Leader Carl Albert, D-Okla., and Sen. Eugene McCarthy, D-Minn., were among the spectators at the scene.

Former classmates were invited too, to come back to the old school house a mile or so down the Pedernales River from the LBJ ranch house.

So it was a day of sentiment and reunion and of serious words, too. Johnson said the nation is indebted to everyone who contributed to putting the new education law into the books.

Books To Flow "By this act," he said, "we bridge the gap between helplessness and hope for more than five million educationally deprived children. We put into the hands of our youth more than 30 million new books—and into many of our schools their first libraries. We reduced the terrible time lag in bringing new teaching techniques into the nation's classrooms."

"We strengthen state and local agencies which bear the burden and the challenge of better education."

Will Fight Tyranny "And we rekindle the revolution—the revolution of the spirit against the tyranny of ignorance."

The President said that as the son of a tenant farmer, he knows education is the only valid passport from poverty. As a former teacher—and he wants to be one again in the future—he said he has great expectations of what the new law will mean for young people.

Now that the new law has been established, Johnson urged no delay in putting it to work. He called it the culmination but only the commencement of a journey.

"Let me urge, as Thomas Jefferson urged, my fellow country men to 'Preach, my dear sir, a crusade against ignorance; establish and improve the law for educating the common people.'"

The President had taken Mrs. Loney to church with him earlier in the day and on a whirl of favorite spots in Johnson City and the country side.

-NAMED BY LBJ— Raborn New CIA Director

Johnson City, Tex. (AP)—William F. Raborn, Jr., 59, retired vice admiral who helped develop the Navy's Polaris missile, was chosen by President Johnson Sunday to head the Central Intelligence Agency.

Raborn, as CIA director, will succeed John A. McCone, a West Coast industrialist, who took over the CIA job in November, 1961, under a recess appointment. After his Navy retirement, Raborn became a vice president of Aerojet General Corp., in Pasadena, Calif.

There had been indications as far back as early December that McCone had told President Johnson that he would like to be released from his duties so as to return to private life.

Ultra Secret

The ultra-secret Central Intelligence Agency is the United States' most sensitive information gathering organization. Its actual size in number of employees has never been disclosed and the amount of money spent for its operation also is concealed.

President Johnson made the surprise announcement of Raborn's selection after signing the $1.3 billion school aid bill at a ceremony outside the old building where he first went to school.

Richard G. Helms was named by the president to be deputy director of the CIA. The President brought Raborn to his Texas ranch Saturday.

Right Away Asked Sunday when Raborn would take over his new job, the President said Raborn will return with him to Washington on Monday.

Helms succeeds Lt. Gen. Marshall S. Carter as deputy director of CIA. A one time reporter, he has been CIA's deputy director for plans since the agency was established in 1947.

Raborn, a native of Decatur, Tex., was born June 8, 1905. A 1928 graduate of the Naval Academy at Annapolis, he was a naval aviator, and during World War II, a command officer in the Pacific. He was awarded the Silver Star for conspicuous gallantry in 1945.

For his work on the Polaris, Raborn was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal and was promoted in 1962 to deputy chief of naval operations for research.

He is married to the former Mildred T. Terrell of Baytown, Tex. they have two children.

Helms was born March 30, 1913, at Saint Davis, Pa. He was a Phi Beta Kappa student at Williams College, Williamstown, Mass., graduating in 1935.

Eye Data Systems' Updating For Two State Departments

By VIRGIL FALLOON Star Staff Writer

State Treasurer Fred Sorensen Sunday released a preliminary survey for modernization of the machine accounting systems for his office and the state auditor's.

Modernization cost is estimated at $65,626 in a survey by the Burroughs Corporation, manufacturer of data processing equipment.

The proposed modernization would provide high-speed and automatic equipment for writing state warrants and accounting procedures with the by-product of "punched tape" information for "input into the tabulating equipment in central accounting," according to the Burroughs report.

Can Be Keyed It said the equipment can be keyed to the "program budgeting" system the state is adopting. Payroll and other warrants would be written by the auditor, as is done at present, which would provide a statement of gross pay, deductions and net pay.

This would provide central accounting with an automatic input for updating each employee's pay record and expenditure codes for governmental reports and other accounting information.

Sorensen said the Burroughs survey for his and the auditor's office could be integrated with the $390,000 budgeting and accounting study being made by Peat, Marwick, Mitchell & Co. for the state.

The study, nearly two years in preparation already, was authorized by the 1963 Legislature. Two bills, implementing central accounting reorganization and a new general services department, are pending completion of the consulting firm's report.

Sorensen said he is somewhat apprehensive of expansion of the central accounting system in view of a report from a Minnesota official.

The official told Sorensen by letter that although Minnesota has a central payroll unit, the state's legislature has not directed its expansion because of high cost of installation and the high salaries required for specialized personnel.

The high Minnesota official, with 34 years' experience in governmental auditing, said he believes "centralization can and oft-times is developed to an unreasonable degree."

The centralized system, especially outside the authority of the pre-auditor, complicates, delays and occasionally makes impossible required corrections in warrant expenditures as established by the pre-audit.

"My experience is that centralization tends to take away the sense of responsibility on the part of department heads and division chiefs and accountants which is so necessary to the reasonable and economical progress of the state."

No Responsibility

"If somebody else is doing their work, providing their income, making their payments and meeting their payrolls, they soon arrive at the opinion that the amounts involved are no responsibility of theirs," the Minnesota official said.

Sorensen said he has given the Burroughs report and other information to several state senators, who have indicated interest.

11 NU Students Will Aid Charlottesville Project

Voter registration experience in a Southern city will be one goal for 11 University of Nebraska students who will travel to Charlottesville, Va., during the spring vacation period, April 16-25.

The students will be working in one of six similar projects being held over the vacation period, sponsored by the National Student Young Women's Christian Association (YWCA). The projects will be conducted in five cities in the South, and one in the North.

Miss Betty Gabehart, executive director of the University YWCA, who will accompany the group, said groups from other universities would be working with Nebraska students. Other students expected to participate include those from the University of Virginia, University of Illinois, Virginia State University, Norfolk division, and New Rochelle College of New York State.

Purposes of the project, Miss Gabehart said, are to lend a supporting hand in the registration work of the NAACP, to give students a chance to have experience in voter registration, to help them understand a Southern city, and to enable them to work with voter registration and education in their own or other communities later.

The current project is the second in a series started in 1964, Miss Gabehart said.

Students from Lincoln participating in the project are Bob Bogott, Peggy Trumble, Colline Van Foxal and Jo Ellen Williams. Others from outside Lincoln are Tony Bryan of Trinidad, West Indies, Bob Cherry of Beatrice, Mrs. Janice Jeffery Funk of Waterloo, Marvin McNeff of Palmer, Gale Muller of Newman Grove, Sharon Mundell of Kimball and Emily Schlaht of Billings, Mont.

In order to be aware of the situation in Virginia, orientation sessions for Nebraska students started on March 21, and will continue until the group leaves. Each student is required to attend at least three sessions.

Thousands Are Hurt In Storms

... INDIANA HARDEST HIT

By The Associated Press

Murderous tornadoes tore through the Midwest from Iowa to Ohio Sunday and Sunday night. At least 112 persons were killed and thousands more were injured.

The heaviest toll was in northern and central Indiana where police and hospitals reported 71 persons were dead and more than 700 injured.

The twisters that began in Iowa and moved east during the day struck western Ohio shortly before 10 p.m. (CST).

Twenty-one persons were reported dead, hundreds injured and scores of buildings demolished. Toledo bore the brunt of the storms and officials said 15 persons were killed there.

Five In A Bus

Five of the victims were in a bus that high winds toppled as it sped along the Detroit-Toledo Expressway. Deaths and heavy property damage also were reported at Pittsfield, near Cleveland, and at Lima.

Hardest hit in Indiana was the city of Marion where tornadoes ripped into most neighborhoods, demolished a shopping center and heavily damaged a Veterans Administration hospital.

One building of the VA hospital reportedly had its roof blown off and many patients were injured and taken in ambulances to other facilities. Among those evacuated were elderly patients suffering from shock.

The tornadoes swept across the Hoosier state in two series, striking the north and central sections a few hours apart.

State police listed 13 persons dead in the Goshen-South Bend area in northern Indiana. Police said six persons were killed in Lebanon and seven others in Dunlap. Other deaths were reported in Crawfordsville and Kokomo. Four were known dead in Marion.

Another series of violent tornadoes whirled across southern Michigan and eight persons were reported killed in the Grand Rapids area. Officials said Branch County, Mich., was in a state of emergency after being struck by a tornado. Ambulances and firefighting equipment was rushed to many areas.

The twisters struck early in the afternoon in eastern Iowa and funneled east into Illinois, Wisconsin, Indiana and Michigan. Deaths were reported in each state along with heavy damage.

Red Cross workers rushed rescue operations into Monroe, Wis., and Crystal Lake, Ill., where at least nine deaths were reported.

At least four persons were killed when high winds overturned their autos, three of them in Wisconsin. Others apparently died when they were trapped in homes or trailers by debris.

The winds, recorded at up to 81 miles per hour were strong enough to fling debris from a recently constructed apartment house on Chicago's Outer Drive. Police reported the drive was blocked.

A child was killed nearby when the winds toppled a sign on him.

By early evening the tornadoes plunged into southern Michigan and at least two persons were reported killed near Grand Rapids, officials said. Tornadoes, rain and huge hail struck at least three cities.

A church in Mantou Beach, Mich., was reportedly felled by a tornado. There were no immediate reports of injuries.

In southern Wisconsin, Weather Bureau officials said the tornado blasted a path of destruction from Monroe to Evansville, about 40 miles. One official said the damage was complete in that area.

Farther south, tornadoes were reported at Rockton, Dixon, Algonquin, Island Lake and Rockford, Ill.

Several farms reported property damage and livestock loss near Lowden, Iowa. In nearby Cedar County, farmer Richard Diercks of rural Carterville said a tornado blew his age 50 to 60 out on its side.

The damage was catastrophic and Diercks was critically injured. A pilot reported a tornado 25 miles west of Front Royal, Va., and another 35 miles southwest of Martinsburg, W. Va. Both communities are about 90 miles west or northwest of Washington, D.C.

In Mason City, Iowa, the American Red Cross opened disaster relief headquarters Sunday for the flood-stricken Iowa-Minnesota area where rampaging rivers caused damage in the millions of dollars.

And, in Southern California a late season snowfall covered mountain areas to depths up to four feet and closed off two main highways.

Red Cross officials said more than 1,000 persons were expected to register for assistance in Iowa. The agency's disaster relief offices were set up in Des Moines, Waterloo, Cherokee and Fort Dodge in Iowa; St. Paul and Mankato in Minnesota and La Crosse, Wis.

Aerial Inspection In Minnesota, Gov. Karl Rolvaag and state and federal officials made an aerial inspection of the flood situation on lower Minnesota and Crow Rivers.

At Mankato, Minn., all dikes were holding well and the critical state of the Minnesota River flooding appeared to have passed. In St. Paul workers reinforced the Mississippi River walls and banks. A crest of 27 feet was expected Friday. Flood stage is 14 feet and the river was at 17.5 and rising one foot each four hours.

The Minnesota River empties into the Mississippi River at St. Paul.

Downstream flooding from the Crow River was reported at Hutchinson, Minn., with communities downstream awaiting flood crests for later in the week. The Crow already was over its banks in Delano and Watertown.

Evacuation of La Crosse area residents moved slowly, but on a 24-hour basis. Members of the Wisconsin National Guard, the Red Cross, the Civil Air Patrol, the Salvation Army and other groups helped with the evacuations.

Meanwhile, state police sealed off the community of Conway, Ark., after a tornado struck twice Saturday night within minutes, killing six persons and injuring more than 100. Damage was estimated at from $10 million to $12 million in the Conway area.

At least five tornadoes ripped through Arkansas and Missouri late Saturday leaving death and destruction in their wake. The Red Cross opened shelters to residents of Bean Lake, Mo., where 25 of 28 trailers in a court were destroyed. There was extensive damage to farm buildings in the Missouri twister areas.

In Mayville, Mo., Mrs. Harlan Buzzard laid down on the living room floor with her three children when she saw the twister approaching. The home was blown away — except for the living room floor. The Buzzards were not hurt.

In southern California's late season snowfall, thousands of winter sports enthusiasts rushed to the mountains where many promptly got snowbound. The California division of highways closed off the two main roads into the popular Big Bear Lake area Sunday after the snow — and scores of temporarily abandoned automobiles — narrowed the roadways to only one lane.

Sukarno Says Economy Weak

Jakarta, Indonesia — President Sukarno told the nation Sunday its economy is in bad shape because of corruption and mismanagement in high government circles. He called for drastic reforms.

His speech, broadcast throughout Indonesia, was made to the Peoples Consultative Congress, the nation's highest legislative body, meeting in Bandung, West Java.

For the first time, he admitted the government's eight-year plan of development, launched in 1961, is a total failure.

Review Necessary

"It is necessary that we make drastic reforms," he said. "It is necessary to review the over-all plan."

He called on the congress to solve Indonesia's food and clothing problems, to increase production of commodities and to "solve the question of foreign capital so as to make us free in the field of economy."

Although he admitted serious economic problems, Sukarno continued to hold Indonesia up as a leader of underdeveloped nations and a fighter against neo-colonialism and imperialism, which he calls neocolim.

To Asians, Africans and Latin Americans he offered aid according to their needs.

Lavish Spending

In some eyes, it has been Indonesia's involvement in international power politics as well as lavish spending for monuments and facilities for international political conferences that has drained the economy.

But Sukarno pinned the blame on what he called corrupt leaders and officials who he said have deviated from the path of socialism and guided democracy.

Deacons Take Up Arms As Defensive Strategy

Bogalusa, La. — A fierce new readiness to fight back if attacked has injected a new factor into Louisiana's civil rights troubles.

The Negro's "non-violent" movement, patterned after Gandhi's patient strategy against the British, is not as non-violent as it was — not in Louisiana, anyhow.

Actual demonstrations remain non-violent. But the defensive posture has changed since the Deacons of Defense and Justice were formed.

Two Chapters

Charles R. Sims, 41, president of the Bogalusa Deacons, said the organization is heavily armed. A similar chapter is in Jonesboro, La., 160 miles to the northwest.

"The only other thing I can say," said Sims, "is that we will not go on the offense. We are the defensive team. If they come in here to hit us they will get hit back."

In Bogalusa or Jonesboro, the suspicious car driving into a Negro sector at night—particularly during times of stress — may be under the gun.

Triggers have been pulled by Negro civil rights workers in both towns — both set in areas described by Negro leaders as Ku Klux Klan strongholds.

In Jonesboro Saturday, a Negro civil rights worker told police he got off four .38-caliber pistol shots at some white youths after one of them fired a blast of buckshot at him. The youths were not identified.

Four University of Kansas students were riding in the car with the Negro at the time. No one was hit—so far as was known.

Gunfire shook a Negro neighborhood in Bogalusa two days earlier. Men guarding a Negro leader's home said they opened up when someone in a passing auto took a shot at the house shortly after midnight. No one was hit.

Both cases remained under investigation, with no arrests.

Arm Of The Law Arrests Leap

Latanya Bailey, 18, hurtling from a third floor ledge to escape fire in the Roxbury section of Boston Sunday, is awaited by policeman James Donovan's outstretched arms. Donovan caught the girl. Neither received anything but slight injuries. The girl jumped despite the pleas of Donovan for her to await the arrival of fire equipment.

Private Rites Set For Actress Linda Darnell

Glenview, Ill. — Private funeral services will be held Monday in Glenview for actress Linda Darnell, 43, who died Saturday of burns received early Friday in the home of friends.

Miss Darnell's adopted daughter, Charlotte (Lola) Marley, 17, who flew from California to her mother's side shortly before the actress' death, is expected to be present.

The star of many Hollywood films was married and divorced three times—to cameraman Peverell Marley, to Philip Liebmann, a New York brewer, and to Merle Robertson, an airline pilot from whom she obtained a divorce in 1963.

Guest of Family

Miss Darnell was the guest of Mrs. Jeanne Curtis of Glenview, former secretary to the actress, and her daughter, Patricia, 16. Mrs. Curtis' husband, Richard, a businessman, was out of town when the fire developed in the living room of the two-story Curtis town house.

The actress, unconscious and with burns over 80% of her body, was found by firemen in the living room where she and the Curtis had watched one of Miss Darnell's old movies on television a few hours earlier. "She giggled all through it," Mrs. Curtis recalled. She and her daughter suffered minor burns in the fire, and a neighbor, David Mudhenk, 22, was cut by glass trying to reach Miss Darnell through a window he broke.

The actress was taken first to Skokie Valley Community Hospital, and then to the burns treatment center at Cook County Hospital in a last-hope effort to avert death.

Suffocation

Dr. John Boswick Jr., director of the center, said that the primary cause of death was the searing effect on Miss Darnell's breathing passages and lungs of superheated air she inhaled. "In a sense, she was suffocated," he said.

Three hours before she died, she heard her daughter read aloud telegrams of concern from friends and fans.

A memorial service for Miss Darnell will be held Monday at 4 p.m. CST in Glenview Community Church in Glenview.

Ex-Sleuth Tells Red Influence

Omaha — Mrs. Julia Brown, a Negro who was an undercover agent for the FBI for nine years, said here Sunday there are more communists in the civil rights movement than in any other movement in the United States.

She spoke at the city auditorium assembly hall under the sponsorship of the Current Affairs Committee of Omaha.

Mrs. Brown told how she joined the Communist Party in Cleveland, Ohio, in 1947, thinking it was a civil rights group.

She said she stayed in the party about nine months, quit and then reported it to the FBI. In 1951, the FBI asked her to join again as an undercover agent and she remained in the party until 1960.

Mrs. Brown told her story before the House Committee on Un-American Activities in 1962.

She said she left the FBI "to tell my story to my people about how the Communist Party is trying to undermine America."

"They've always tried using my people to further their aims," she said. "They used me to influence other Negroes into rioting. They used people who wanted to hear about a pie in the sky, telling them, 'We'll take over a state in the South for you'."

"If the Negro would denounce the Red conspiracy in this fight, there wouldn't be any violence in the civil rights movement. They've caused the Negro to become so confused he doesn't know what he is fighting for."

"My husband graduated me to housework, but the poultry belong to my part of the family enterprise and that prize Holstein cow that won all those 4-H ribbons for me is part of the livestock and I will be the one doing the milking," said Mrs. Lashley.

Her Department

When it comes to the economics of farming Mrs. Lashley says, "That's my department. You can be assured another 25 to 30% increase in come would accelerate spending by agriculture and boost business."

She turns to a very sober expression when she discusses one trouble that hasn't changed on the farm: hail storms, that have taken a big bite out of crops in their area the past few years.

Norma says she still prefers being outside to being indoors, but when it comes to feeding her husky husband she says it must be food prepared in the kitchen and not something she just hurriedly takes from a can.

It is refreshing to meet a young farm wife who is so enthusiastic about the future in the country.

Another group of British farmers broke up a political meeting with cries of "Milk, Milk" in objection to the government not raising the official price of milk as much as they thought it should have.

Man Sought For Killing Trucker

Homer — A widespread search was under way Sunday for a man, believed to be of Indian descent, wanted for questioning in connection with the fatal beating of a 19-year-old Wisconsin trucker.

Acting Dakota County Attorney Rodney Smith said "We've got a pretty good idea of who we're seeking."

The investigation Sunday was concentrated on questioning of persons between Manawa, Wis., home of the slain Michael Bauer, and a back road near Homer where his body was found in a ditch Friday evening.

Smith said "An Indian was seen driving the Bauer's car pulling a converted horse trailer loaded with calves. The car became mired in mud and was abandoned after the clutch and transmission went out."

Bauer's body was identified Saturday by his father, John Bauer, of Manawa, and his employer Bill Nolan. They were notified after authorities found the abandoned car and trailer loaded with calves.

Smith said robbery apparently was the motive. Bauer had about $50 in his wallet when he left Manawa with a load of calves, bound for Dresden, Kan. The wallet is missing.

Smith said an autopsy indicated young Bauer had been knocked out, then placed in a ditch still alive. The youth died when his head was smashed in by shale rocks picked up along the nearby road. He was believed to have been dead less than an hour when found.

David Blacker, Sun Publisher, Dies Sunday

Omaha — David Blacker, 63, Omaha newspaper publisher and civic leader, died Sunday of a heart ailment.

Blacker suffered a seizure at his home and died a short time later in a hospital. He had suffered a heart condition for some time. He was owner and publisher of the Sun newspapers.

Born in Russia, he came to the United States about 50 years ago. He worked in various newspaper jobs until 1935, when he purchased the South Omaha Sun, a weekly publication.

Blacker soon after founded the Dundee News and in 1954, purchased the Benson Times and North Omaha booster. He merged the weekly area district papers in 1958 into the Sun Newspapers.

Blacker was past president of the Beth-El Synagogue and past president of the South Omaha Merchants Association. He was a member of the board of directors of the Omaha Chamber of Commerce, Jewish Federation, Lutheran Hospital and South Omaha Boys Club.

He had been a member of the Board of the Y.M.C.A., headed the Jewish Philanthropies, Israel Bond Drive, and long had been active in United Community Services drives.

Man Sought For Killing Trucker

Homer (AP) — A widespread search was under way Sunday for a man, believed to be of Indian descent, wanted for questioning in connection with the fatal beating of a 19-year-old Wisconsin trucker.

Acting Dakota County Attorney Rodney Smith said "We've got a pretty good idea of who we're seeking."

The investigation Sunday was concentrated on questioning of persons between Manawa, Wis., home of the slain Michael Bauer, and a back road near Homer where his body was found in a ditch Friday evening.

Smith said "An Indian was seen driving the Bauer's car pulling a converted horse trailer loaded with calves. The car became mired in mud and was abandoned after the clutch and transmission went out."

Bauer's body was identified Saturday by his father, John Bauer, of Manawa, and his employer, Bill Nolan. They were notified after authorities found the abandoned car and trailer loaded with calves.

Smith said robbery apparently was the motive. Bauer had about $50 in his wallet when he left Manawa with a load of calves, bound for Dresden, Kan. The wallet is missing.

Smith said an autopsy indicated young Bauer had been knocked out, then placed in a ditch, still alive. The youth died when his head was smashed in by shale rocks picked up along the nearby road. He was believed to have been dead less than an hour when found.

North Platte Youth Heads Nebraska Future Farmers

Lawrence Kuhlmann of North Platte, a junior member of the firm of Orvil Kuhlmann & Sons OK Polled Herefords, has been named president of the Nebraska Association of Future Farmers of America.

Young Kuhlmann's activities in the livestock world have been widespread. Earlier in the FFA convention he was named winner of the year's Livestock Farming Foundation Award. He has won the State Fair Gold Medal in showmanship and has exhibited prize winning cattle at the Fort Worth Stock Show and the Arizona National Livestock Show.

Kuhlmann's activities in school have kept pace with his livestock achievements where he has served as president of the North Platte High FFA Chapter and the Student Council. He has also earned membership in the National Honor Society.

Kuhlmann took over leadership of the state FFA Saturday at the conclusion of the 37th annual FFA state convention from Ivan Bartling, a NU sophomore from Hooper.

Other FFA officers elected were: Kenneth Nagel of Waverly secretary, and four

An Inevitable Development

By WILLIAM O. DOBLER

It was a long time coming but we knew all along that it had to warm up and clear up eventually. The rainy season is still with us but spring has definitely established itself and summer will not be long in coming. There may be places in this world where the climate is more ideal than it is here but there is nowhere else on earth where good climate is more appreciated than here.

We are able to get so much more out of warm spring days and the hot sun of summer because we know the other extreme. And just about the time we have tired of the heat, nature will change the scenery for us again. And the change involves more than just the climate. There in a corner of the garage sits the lawn-mower, covered with dust and cold to the touch. But its handles will soon be warmed and its horse-power combined with a little human muscle power to change our weekend routines. It may seem impossible at the moment, but the time will come, and quickly now, when we will wonder how the grass can grow so fast rather than wondering if it will ever grow again.

Into the fields will be going the farmers, who despite any and all adversity, never get enough of the good earth. Maybe nature or the market place got the best of them last year but they will plant their seeds just the same again this year. They will do so with some natural confidence, with an inborn urge to make the soil produce and a simple love of the earth.

In both the city and the country, the pattern of life will now be changing. The days will grow longer and the added light will allow us extra time for getting things done. Before we know it, the grocer's shelves will be crowded with the fresh fruits and vegetables of the growing season.

These first offerings are often resisted since the price will drop a little as they become more plentiful but one's resistance can endure only so long. How long can you pass by that big pile of watermelons, contemplate the juicy, red meat that lies beneath the green rind, and not hoist one into your grocery basket? Not for long, and the same goes for the fresh peaches, cherries and other delicacies that will soon be common at a reasonable price.

And about the time you have no resistance left at all, strawberries will appear on the scene and your downfall will be complete. The real delight is to live in an area where strawberries are produced in enough abundance that they are actually cheap. And even more delightful is to live within easy distance of a good supply of country whipping cream.

With that combination, you hardly need anything more but still more can be added. Add to it an old-fashioned recipe for shortcake and you can sit back and contemplate a concoction fit for any king. Of course, you don't often get that kind of shortcake any more and thick country whipping cream comes at a pretty high rate but what a pleasant thing it is to contemplate. Something has changed in the food world because old-fashioned strawberry shortcake topped with thick cream didn't used to be so unusual.

Some things, though, of the spring and summer season never change and probably never will. Any day now, if it hasn't already happened, you will spy the youngsters outside barefooted. The first couple of times it happens, you may correct the situation, convinced that it is not yet warm enough for such foolishness.

But the barefooted practice is one you might as well learn to live with. It means mighty dirty feet and a bath that evening but it has certainly refreshed the spirit. It might mean a cut now and then, too, but if you aren't willing to live with a little danger, the days can become pretty dull. The same thing goes for a walk along the creek or a climb in the big back yard tree.

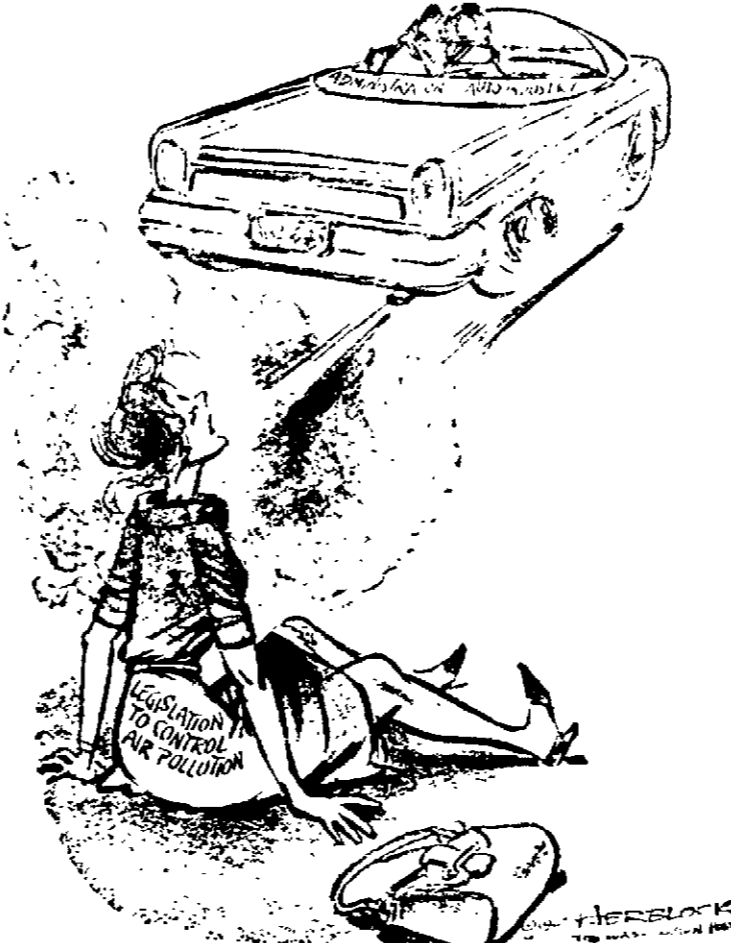

How many caves have been explored, too, by the young when it might have meant disaster? A cave can always fall in, despite the fact that they seldom do.

One cannot advocate absolute disregard of all precaution but our sensibilities demand a clear picture of reality. The young are going to experience many of the same things that the older generation once enjoyed in their youth and the condition of adult nerves would be much improved with realization of this. The top of the tree was once a favorite place for you so why should it change with the next generation?

And what child, sweating under the summer sun, can resist a dash through the sprinkler? Clothes and shoes get wet but they dry out in a hurry in the middle of July. Yes, it is a time to enjoy life and to make the most out of new challenges and new experiences.

Johnson Laments A World Of Hate

WASHINGTON — Almost every presidential speech, no matter who is in the White House, is a composite job. Various advisers and speechwriters participate. Sections which pertain to various departments of the government are cleared with those departments. Sometimes friendly governments are consulted.

If the United Nations is involved, its officials or the American delegates at the UN in New York are consulted.

The skilled observer can usually tell, however, which sections of Lyndon Johnson's speeches were written by Lyndon Johnson. And in the recent, vitally important John Hopkins speech the last part was definitely his.

In it, after admitting "we have made mistakes," he said:

"For centuries nations have struggled among each other. But we dream of a world where disputes are settled by law and reason. And we will try to make it so."

"For most of history men have hated and killed one another. But we dream of an end of war and we will try to make it so."

"We often say how impressive power is. But I do not find it impressive. The guns and bombs, the rockets and warships, are all symbols of human failure. They are necessary symbols. They protect what we cherish. But they are witness to human folly. A great dam built across a river is impressive... the sight of healthy children in a classroom is impressive. These — not arms — are the achievements which the American nation believes to be impressive.

"This generation of the world must choose: Destroy or build, kill or aid, hate or understand... we can do these things on a scale never dreamed of before."

There was another section of the speech which the President felt quite strongly about — the first section, which he didn't actually write but which reflected his determination to protect the independence of South Viet Nam.

Those who have worked with the President, and know the long hours he has spent, day and night, trying to solve the difficult problem he inherited, know how deeply he feels about this. They know of the many things he has been awakened after midnight with cable reports on bombing raids.

He has given orders to U.S. pilots to avoid killing people on their North Viet Nam missions. And to those who have argued with him regarding these missions he has sometimes said:

"Which is worse—blowing up concrete bridges or killing secretaries sitting at their typewriters in the American embassy? What we have done is destroy bridges that don't bleed, and radar stations and munitions dumps. We haven't killed people."

MARQUIS CHILDS

View On Viet Nam Good Though Late

WASHINGTON—President Johnson has taken a long step toward persuading opinion around the world that the United States does not want to expand the war in Viet Nam.

The speech at Johns Hopkins was overdue. But now that it has been given, its broad sweep should convince all those who prefer to believe otherwise that this country is willing to go a long way to restore peace and well-being to a shattered land.

Whether the proposals the President makes for a broad program of aid have come in time is the nagging question. Attitudes have hardened on both sides. Bombing in the North has contributed to the hardening process, as have such acts of savage terrorism as the attack on the American embassy in Saigon.

The President said that he believes that while air strikes alone will not achieve the preservation of an independent Viet Nam, he considers them a necessary part of "the surest road to peace." That was one of the extraordinary things about the speech—both the hawks and the doves had an inning.

The final score will not be known for some time. Whether what amounts to a hand held out directly to North Viet Nam, far more specifically than in the hint of a week ago will meet with a response is the great uncertainty. Part of the peril of this moment is that Hanoi is a great unknown.

The idea of a TVA in the Mekong delta has been around for many years. The potential has always been there for uniting the peoples living in that great rich area if only the impetus had come in technical and economic assistance.

Steps are being taken now that could have made a world of difference only a short time ago. A team of five specialists from the rural electric cooperatives in this country is going out to Viet Nam to conduct a study on whether a similar cooperative electric system is feasible there.

One may say better late than never. The President could not have found a better man to inaugurate an aid program, which he says is to begin at the earliest possible moment regardless of the war, than Eugene Black. As former head of the World Bank he showed not only imagination but a true respect for the realities of development in underdeveloped nations. Black will inspire confidence that this is not to be a crash propaganda program.

The White House makes clear that negotiations can go on without a cease-fire and without pre-conditions. To this last there is one exception—there will be no negotiation with the national liberation front, which pretenses to speak for the Viet Cong guerrillas in South Viet Nam. Red China's premier, Chou En-lai, has just conveyed word through the United Nations secretary general, U Thant, that the only possible negotiation is with the Viet Cong.

Profiles In Science

Who has ever heard of a circular gun barrel through which bullets go around and around, picking up speed as they go finally striking the target?

Since the 1930's many people have heard of such things. They are cyclotrons, variously known as atom smashers and atom guns, with which science has learned much about the structure of the atom.

The search to understand matter's basic arrangement began hundreds and even thousands of years ago, but only in the last century has much progress been made.

In 1885 Thomas Edison noticed—and wondered about—the effect of electrons, particles that then had not even been named.

In 1897 J. J. Thomson calculated that an atom of matter is made up of electrons, each of which he figured, in the case of hydrogen, weighed about 1-1800th of the total weight of an atom.

In 1911 C. T. R. Wilson photographed electrons and their paths through space, a feat for which he received the Nobel Prize.

About the same time Ernest Rutherford, a student of Thomson, discovered the proton and for the first time in recent centuries described the basic arrangement of matter as the atom, in which a central heavy mass, or proton, was the focal object for revolving electrons. This system has commonly been compared to the organization of the solar system, with the proton sun in the center of orbiting electron planets.

The makeup of this nucleus, or heart, of the atom seemed the last kernel of mystery about matter.

One of the greatest of atomic investigators was Ernest Lawrence (1901-1958), born in South Dakota and for many years one of the greatest scientific brilliants of the University of California.

It was Lawrence who conceived of a way of using electrical particles as bullets which, when aimed at the heart of the atom, would break it wide open so that science could learn how, and of what, the nucleus was made.

The problem was chiefly one of speed, and Lawrence built his first cyclotron to give the bullet enough speed to smash the target. The particles used to "bombard" the atom were guided and kept on course by electromagnets and were given fil- lips of added speed by repeated and rhythmic electric charges.

The first small cyclotron worked well, and from then on these tools that unlocked additional mysteries of matter were built in many parts of the world. Lawrence himself supervised the building of many of them, including the great one at Berkeley.

He and other physicists used many different kinds of particles as bullets in the atom guns. In 1940 Lawrence won the Nobel Prize for the invention of the cyclotron. Because of the war in Europe it was awarded him in Berkeley by the Swedish consul-general.

Mental Health

Lincoln, Neb.

The Lancaster County Association for Mental Health perhaps chose an inopportune time for a membership campaign, coming at the same time as the Easter Seal drive and the current hospital campaign.

We certainly feel these other two community-wide drives are worthy. Many of our members are working on those, in addition to our own.

In spite of this, however, we have gained almost a hundred new members. Our goal in the foreseeable future is 300, at least. We would like to reach that goal by the time of our public meeting on May 20. Membership dues are our only source of funds with which to serve this community in education and action in such a widespread field as mental health. We need and appreciate community support.

Water Safety

Lincoln, Neb.

To "Native Nebraskan," I say that we don't need life guards at the Salt-Wahoo lakes. All that is needed is good old-fashioned horse sense. We should follow all the rules of water safety, such as:

- (1) Wear a life jacket or belt when water-skiing or boating.
- (2) Never swim alone.
- (3) Don't overdo it when swimming. In other words, don't swim to the center of the lake and expect to get back to shore. If you are an average swimmer, you'll never make it.
- (4) No horse-play.
- (5) And last, but not least, when in trouble, don't panic. Even a non-swimmer can make it to safety if he simply relaxes and floats.

The Red Cross has booklets on water safety and gives swimming classes every summer. We should take advantage of them. Also swimming is offered for high schoolers as a substitute for physical education in all three Lincoln high schools. I know because I learned to swim in classes at Lincoln High.

Amanda Gammel

Lincoln, Neb.

Mrs. Amanda Gammel will be 99 the 21st of May. She is a smiling, bright-eyed little lady, and meeting her affords her acquaintances with gentle mirth, unbelievable interest and pleasure.

She is most active, hears quite well without a hearing aid. Now and then there are aches in her bones but she doesn't complain. It is then that she does permit the pampering of a wheel chair, but one is inclined to wonder if it isn't the pleasure of the ride that she glories in.

Mrs. Gammel is everyone's friend, and everyone is hers. All within reach of her small hand and soft voice are greeted. Visitors charm her and children bring a sparkle to her eyes. She tempts them to linger.

Her husband, James, once worked in Lincoln. The Gammels had three children. She is a shining example of pioneer strength, smiling courage, with no fears from yesterday nor today, and certainly none for tomorrow.

Self-Reliance

Lincoln, Neb.

This is a warning to parents of small children who walk to school. The new pedestrian ordinance may not be as much protection for your child as you may think!

Like many greater laws sometimes do to those much older and wiser, this ordinance which requires drivers to stop for pedestrians entering the crosswalk lulls the children into a false sense of security which could result in disaster.

When a driver who knows and obeys the ordinance stops for the children, they so many times run immediately into the street—not thinking that there may be another car coming whose driver is not so well informed. It is frightening to think that by stopping, you might be luring an unsuspecting child into the path of an oncoming car.

The moral to the story is clear — children should be taught respect and appreciation for what the law can do, but they should also be taught at the same time that they cannot rely upon it for complete protection or to do their thinking for them.

Good Friday

Lincoln, Neb.

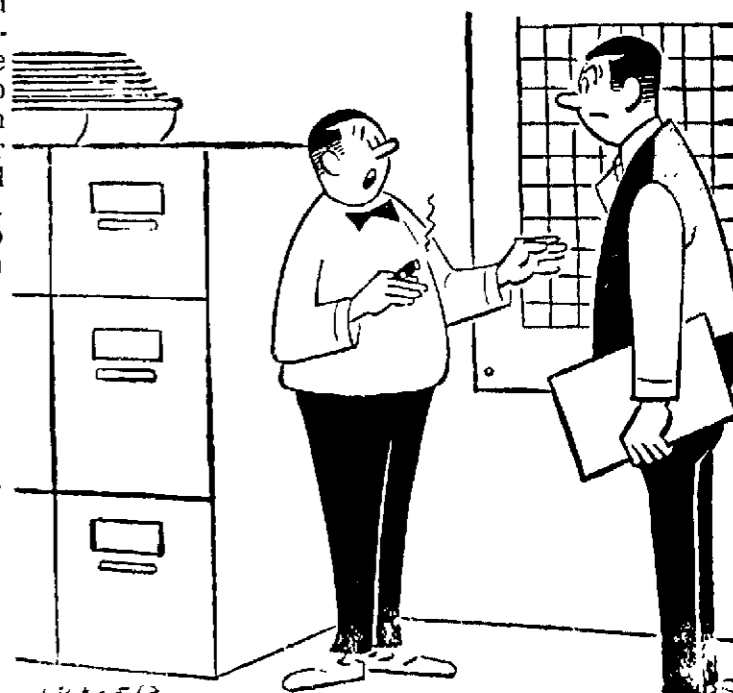

I am wondering why the City of Lincoln doesn't close on Good Friday, one of the most important days to all Christians. I think all stores and other organizations should close. We observe Christmas, the day of His birth, but Good Friday was the day of His death, the day He bore our griefs and carried our sorrow.

This is something that Lincoln should do to honor Him.

An Inevitable Development

By WILLIAM O. DOBLER

It was a long time coming but we knew all along that it had to warm up and clear up eventually. The rainy season is still with us but spring has definitely established itself and summer will not be long in coming. There may be places in this world where the climate is more ideal than it is here but there is nowhere else on earth where good climate is more appreciated than here.

We are able to get so much more out of warm spring days and the hot sun of summer because we know the other extreme.

Grass-Cutting Time

And just about the time we have tired of the heat, nature will change the scenery for us again. And the change involves more than just the climate. There in a corner of the garage sits the lawn-mower, covered with dust and cold to the touch. But its handles will soon be warmed and its horse-power combined with a little human muscle power to change our weekend routines. It may seem impossible at the moment, but the time will come, and quickly now, when we will wonder how the grass can grow so fast rather than wondering if it will ever grow again.

Into the fields will be going the farmers, who despite any and all adversity, never get enough of the good earth. Maybe nature or the market place got the best of them last year but they will plant their seeds just the same again this year. They will do so with some natural confidence, with an inborn urge to make the soil produce and a simple love of the earth.

In both the city and the country, the pattern of life will now be changing. The days will grow longer and the added light will allow us extra time for getting things done. Before we know it, the grocer's shelves will be crowded with the fresh fruits and vegetables of the growing season.

These first offerings are often resisted since the price will drop a little as they become more plentiful but one's resistance can endure only so long. How long can you pass by that big pile of watermelons, contemplate the juicy, red meat that lies beneath the green rind, and not hoist one into your grocery basket? Not for long, and the same goes for the fresh peaches, cherries and other delicacies that will soon be common at a reasonable price.

And about the time you have no resistance left at all, strawberries will appear on the scene and your downfall will be complete. The real delight is to live in an area where strawberries are produced in enough abundance that they are actually cheap. And even more delightful is to live within easy distance of a good supply of country whipping cream.

With that combination, you hardly need anything more but still more can be added. Add to it an old-fashioned recipe for shortcake and you can sit back and contemplate a concoction fit for any king. Of course, you don't often get that kind of shortcake any more and thick country whipping cream comes at a pretty high rate but what a pleasant thing it is to contemplate. Something has changed in the food world because old-fashioned strawberry shortcake topped with thick cream didn't used to be so unusual.

Some things, though, of the spring and summer season never change and probably never will. Any day now, if it hasn't already happened, you will spy the youngsters outside barefooted. The first couple of times it happens, you may correct the situation, convinced that it is not yet warm enough for such foolishness.

But the barefooted practice is one you might as well learn to live with. It means mighty dirty feet and a bath that evening but it has certainly refreshed the spirit. It might mean a cut now and then, too, but if you aren't willing to live with a little danger, the days can become pretty dull. The same thing goes for a walk along the creek or a climb in the big back yard tree.

How many caves have been explored, too, by the young when it might have meant disaster?

Joys Of Youth The Same

A cave can always fall in, despite the fact that they seldom do. One cannot advocate absolute disregard of all precaution but our sensibilities demand a clear picture of reality. The young are going to experience many of the same things that the older generation once enjoyed in their youth and the condition of adult nerves would be much improved with realization of this. The top of the tree was once a favorite place for you so why should it change with the next generation?

And what child, sweating under the summer sun, can resist a dash through the sprinkler? Clothes and shoes get wet but they dry out in a hurry in the middle of July. Yes, it is a time to enjoy life and to make the most out of new challenges and new experiences.

Quiet No Success Sign

One hears so little of Cuban Premier Fidel Castro these days that it might be wondered if he has everything under good control in his island stronghold. The truth of the matter is, however, that things are quiet because Castro has enough trouble at home to keep him occupied and unconcerned with outside affairs.

Cuba continues to be probably the worst bargain Moscow ever got. As a Red stepping-stone in South America, it has been a considerable failure. Not only has communism failed to make any gains in South America, but there are today signs that the countries there are beginning to emerge into strong nations.

As for Castro, it just gets tougher and tougher. The Cuban government, for instance, now owns practically all the housing in Cuba. But Castro has discovered that a sticky prerequisite to profitable ownership is payment of rent and the dwellers are balking in wholesale lots at this.

Conditions just go from bad to worse. With the rents unpaid, the government cannot keep up the units, which causes more displeasure and more refusal to pay. Also, funds cannot be accumulated to build new housing, desperately needed to alleviate the crowded conditions that exist.

And to top it all off, a government rent collection agency cannot very well be set up since "committees for the fight against bureaucracy" are just being established. That, obviously, could get to be quite a vicious circle itself. Castro may have once been quite a revolutionary but as a head of state, he is proving to be a dismal failure.

The Texas Way

Leave it to the Texans to throw caution to the winds.

Down in Houston they scared up $31.6 million to build a mammoth, air-conditioned, sports stadium fully enclosed. The stadium will accommodate 65,000 people at a convention; somewhat less to watch a football game and slightly less than that for a big league ball game. Now the stadium is done. It was an architectural success. But at this late stage they have found out one thing. It isn't successful for daytime baseball. The fretted ceiling of the enormous dome interferes with the human eye trying to judge a fly ball. To complicate things the Houston Astros have about 20 daytime games scheduled.

Actually this is a rather considerable fault. In a more cautious state like Nebraska we would have carefully checked out the ball playing problem before we built the stadium. More accurately we would never have built such a thing.

But it is our guess that the hell-for-leather people at Houston will work their way out of this thing somehow, and will live to derive rich rewards for their pioneering. It is something they learned drilling for oil. Many holes turned out to be dead losses but now and then one was a gusher. The dry holes never slowed down the hunt for gushers.

They will do one of three things. They will make the visitors play night ball. Or they will black out the whole roof and turn on the lights. Or they will change the rules of the game to make any ball hit in the air an automatic out. But they won't take a loss on their stadium.

Perhaps that is why the Texans do so well.

A Question Of Teaching

A college instructor, writing in the National Review, created somewhat of a sensation when he gave out the results of a random sampling among 100 students from an affluent neighborhood.

As a basis of his survey he chose 25 presumably well known names and asked the students to identify them. More than one third didn't seem to know of the existence of William Miller although as recently as last fall he was running as the Republican candidate for vice president. Robert McNamara was an equally vague character although one student identified him as the leader of the New York crime syndicate. Two fifths had no idea who was Dean Rusk or Sir Alec Douglas Home. George Lincoln Rockwell left the bulk of them in confusion. One thought he was a principal figure in the Negro civil rights effort. Hardly anyone had any recollection of Mary McCarthy although one was sure she was a TV weather girl. Mao Tse-tung was thought to be a Japanese philosopher.

Two students properly identified James Reston, New York Times public affairs writer. No one knew anything about Jean Paul Sartre.

This was all taken to be a serious indictment of present day education and a sign that there are no students on any campus that have any knowledge of public affairs. The fact therefore must be that campus rebellions must be stimulated by nefarious outside interests.

The premise of course is unfair. No school has ever been devised capable of teaching everything and the great majority of students are addressing their maximum intellectual effort to the curriculum. To most of them the adult world is yet a few years away and they will come into focus on it when the time comes. Almost anyone can be made to look stupid if he is asked questions out of his frame of knowledge.

Johnson Laments A World Of Hate

WASHINGTON — Almost every presidential speech, no matter who is in the White House, is a composite job. Various advisers and speechwriters participate. Sections which pertain to various departments of the government are cleared with those departments. Sometimes friendly governments are consulted.

If the United Nations is involved, its officials or the American delegates at the UN in New York are consulted.

The skilled observer can usually tell, however, which sections of Lyndon Johnson's speeches were written by Lyndon Johnson. And in the recent, vitally important John Hopkins speech the last part was definitely his.

In it, after admitting "we have made mistakes," he said:

"For centuries nations have struggled among each other. But we dream of a world where disputes are settled by law and reason. And we will try to make it so."

"For most of history men have hated and killed one another. But we dream of an end of war and we will try to make it so."

"We often say how impressive power is. But I do not find it impressive. The guns and bombs, the rockets and warships, are all symbols of human failure. They are necessary symbols. They protect what we cherish. But they are witness to human folly. A great dam built across a river is impressive . . . the sight of healthy children in a classroom is impressive. These — not arms — are the achievements which the American nation believes to be impressive.

"This generation of the world must choose: Destroy or build, kill or aid, hate or understand . . . we can do these things on a scale never dreamed of before."

There was another section of the speech which the President felt quite strongly about — the first section, which he didn't actually write but which reflected his determination to protect the independence of South Vietnam.

Those who have worked with the President, and know the long hours he has spent, day and night, trying to solve the difficult problem he inherited, know how deeply he feels about this. They know of the many things he has been awakened after midnight with cabled reports on bombing raids.

He has given orders to U.S. pilots to avoid killing people on their North Vietnam missions. And to those who have argued with him regarding these missions he has sometimes said:

"Which is worse—blowing up concrete bridges or killing secretaries sitting at their typewriters in the American embassy? What we have done is destroy bridges that don't bleed, and radar stations and munitions dumps. We haven't killed people."

MARQUIS CHILDS

View On Viet Nam Good Though Late

WASHINGTON — President Johnson has taken a long step toward persuading opinion around the world that the United States does not want to expand the war in Vietnam.

The speech at Johns Hopkins was overdue. But now that it has been given, its broad sweep should convince all those who prefer to believe otherwise that this country is willing to go a long way to restore peace and well-being to a shattered land.

Whether the proposals the President makes for a broad program of aid have come in time is the nagging question. Attitudes have hardened on both sides. Bombing in the North has contributed to the hardening process, as have such acts of savage terrorism as the attack on the American embassy in Saigon.

The President said that he believes that while air strikes alone will not achieve the preservation of an independent Viet Nam, he considers them a necessary part of "the surest road to peace." That was one of the extraordinary things about the speech—both the hawks and the doves had an inning.

The final score will not be known for some time. Whether what amounts to a hand held out directly to North Viet Nam, far more specifically than in the hint of a week ago, will meet with a response is the great uncertainty. Part of the peril of this moment is that Hanoi is a great unknown.

Profiles In Science

Who has ever heard of a circular gun barrel through which bullets go around and around, picking up speed as they go, finally striking the target?

Since the 1930's many people have heard of such things. They are cyclotrons, variously known as atom smashers and atom guns, with which science has learned much about the structure of the atom.

The search to understand matter's basic arrangement began hundreds and even thousands of years ago, but only in the last century has much progress been made.

In 1885 Thomas Edison noticed—and wondered about—the effect of electrons, particles that then had not even been named.

In 1897 J. J. Thomson calculated that an atom of matter is made up of electrons, each of which he figured, in the case of hydrogen, weighed about 1/1800th of the total weight of an atom.

In 1911 C. T. R. Wilson photographed electrons and their paths through space, a feat for which he received the Nobel Prize.

About the same time Ernest Rutherford, a student of Thomson, discovered the proton and for the first time in recent centuries described the basic arrangement of matter as the atom, in which a central heavy mass, or proton, was the focal object for revolving electrons. This system has commonly been compared to the organization of the solar system, with the proton sun in the center of orbiting electron planets.

The makeup of this nucleus, or heart, of the atom seemed the last kernel of mystery about matter.

One of the greatest of atomic investigators was Ernest Lawrence (1901-1958), born in South Dakota and for many years one of the greatest scientific brilliants of the University of California.

It was Lawrence who conceived of a way of using electrical particles as bullets which, when aimed at the heart of the atom, would break it wide open so that science could learn how, and of what, the nucleus was made.

The problem was chiefly one of speed, and Lawrence built his first cyclotron to give the bullet enough speed to smash the target. The particles used to "bombard" the atom were guided and kept on course by electromagnets and were given fil- lips of added speed by repeated and rhythmic electric charges.

The first small cyclotron worked well, and from then on these tools that unlocked additional mysteries of matter were built in many parts of the world. Lawrence himself supervised the building of many of them, including the great one at Berkeley.

He and other physicists used many different kinds of particles as bullets in the atom guns. In 1940 Lawrence won the Nobel Prize for the invention of the cyclotron. Because of the war in Europe it was awarded him in Berkeley by the Swedish council-general.

Mental Health

Lincoln, Neb.

The Lancaster County Association for Mental Health perhaps chose an inopportune time for a membership campaign, coming at the same time as the Easter Seal drive and the current hospital campaign.

We certainly feel these other two community-wide drives are worthy. Many of our members are working on those, in addition to our own.

In spite of this, however, we have gained almost a hundred new members. Our goal in the foreseeable future is 300, at least. We would like to reach that goal by the time of our public meeting on May 20. Membership dues are our only source of funds with which to serve this community in education and action in such a widespread field as mental health. We need and appreciate community support.

Water Safety

Lincoln, Neb.

To "Native Nebraskan" I say that we don't need life-guards at the Salt-Wahloo lakes. All that is needed is good old-fashioned horse sense. We should follow all the rules of water safety, such as:

- (1) Wear a life jacket or belt when water-skiing or boating.
- (2) Never swim alone.
- (3) Don't overdo it when swimming. In other words, don't swim to the center of the lake and expect to get back to shore. If you are an average swimmer, you'll never make it.
- (4) No horse-play.
- (5) And last, but not least, when in trouble, don't panic. Even a non-swimmer can make it to safety if he simply relaxes and floats.

The Red Cross has booklets on water safety and gives swimming classes every summer. We should take advantage of them. Also swimming is offered for high schoolers as a substitute for physical education in all three Lincoln high schools. I know because I learned to swim in classes at Lincoln High.

Soldier, Guards Die In Gun Battle Outside Shah's Office

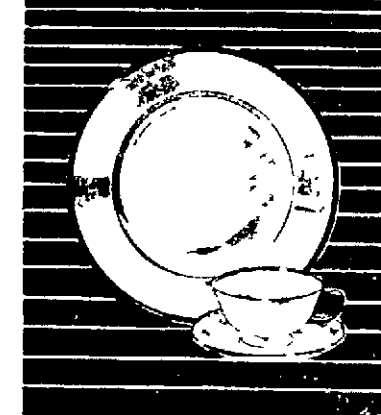

Tehran, Iran (AP)—A "threatening and shooting" soldier and two of the Shah's bodyguards were killed in a gun battle outside the royal palace Saturday, the government announced Sunday. Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi was not harmed though a high-ranking government official said the soldier intended to shoot the monarch. A photographer took the Shah's picture during an audience Sunday morning and reported him in good spirits. One government source expressed belief the assailant had run amok. Other authentic sources gave this account of Saturday's incident: Used Tommy Gun At about 9 a.m. the 45-year-old Shah left his private palace and drove his own car across the road to the marble palace, where he has his office. As he alighted from the car at the entrance to the building, a conscripted member of the imperial guard standing 40 to 50 yards away opened fire with his tommy gun. The Shah's bodyguards rushed the ruler into the building, and into his office on the ground floor. The conscript charged forward into the entrance of the building, firing as he went. As the fatally wounded guards fell, they brought down and killed the assailant with their own fire. Details as reported Sunday differed considerably from an announced Saturday, a few hours after the shooting. That version said the affray was the result of a private argument between two members of the Shah's imperial guard, and that only one soldier was killed.

Utah Girl Wins, Lincolnite Places In Essay Competition

Washington (AP)—The daughter of a handicapped laboratory technician in Salt Lake City, Utah, was named Sunday night as the winner of a $1,000 essay contest sponsored by the President's Committee on the Employment of the Handicapped. She is 18-year-old Marilyn Dautrich, a senior at Granite High School in Salt Lake City. A Lincoln, Neb., entrant Robert Dennis Tucker won $200 for his fifth-place essay. Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz will present the $1,000 first prize award to Miss Dautrich at the annual meeting of the committee in Washington April 29. The prize money is contributed by the Disabled American Veterans. Miss Dautrich wrote an essay about the success of her father, Claude W. Dautrich, and five other men in overcoming serious physical handicaps in their jobs and personal lives. The contest, co-sponsored by the Governors' Committee on Employment of the Handicapped, is now in its 17th year. Other prize winners announced are Anita Kenison of Jola, Kan., second place, who will receive $600; Woody Jenkins, Baton Rouge, La., third, $400; Melody Jean Smith, Reno, Nev., fourth, $300; and Tucker. They also will attend the April 29 meeting of the President's committee to receive their awards. The cost of transportation and expenses of the five winners to Washington will be contributed by the AFL-CIO state federations and councils in their respective states.

Damascus, Syria (AP)—Search parties Sunday toiled to the peak of 1,800-foot Mt. Wadi El Kanissa, where a Royal Jordanian Airlines plane crashed Saturday killing all 54 persons aboard. They found only charred wreckage and began bringing the bodies down. The plane, on a flight from Beirut, Lebanon, to Cairo via Amman, Jordan, carried 50 tourists—47 Belgian, two Dutch and one Swiss. There also were four Jordanian crew members aboard. The mountain where the plane crashed is near the Syrian-Lebanese border. Reporters who accompanied the investigating team, headed by Jordan's Minister of Communications Aly Dajani and Syria's Director of Civil Aviation Yumni Dumluji, saw pathetic souvenirs of the travelers' sojourn in the Middle East. There were inlaid brass trays, mosaic boxes and other such objects scattered about. Bodies were carried to the foot of the mountain where they were taken by ambulance to the National Hospital morgue in Damascus. The investigating team has not yet found the reason for the crash.

Monday will see the postmasters registering from 7 a.m. to 4 p.m. conducting business meetings and finishing the day with a social event. Tuesday morning at 9 the postmasters will elect new officers. The convention will be closed with a banquet and dance Tuesday evening. Mrs. Berger confirmed the report that her group will follow the national pattern—to march in front of the Internal Revenue Office in Omaha and pass out leaflets asking abolition of federal income taxes. Soldier, Guards Die In Gun Battle Outside Shah's Office

Tehran, Iran (AP)—A "threatening and shooting" soldier and two of the shah's bodyguards were killed in a gun battle outside the royal palace Saturday, the government announced Sunday. Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi was not harmed, though a high-ranking government official said the soldier intended to shoot the monarch.

A photographer took the shah's picture during an audience Sunday morning and reported him in good spirits.

Utah Girl Wins, Lincolnite Places In Essay Competition

Washington (AP)—The daughter of a handicapped laboratory technician in Salt Lake City, Utah, was named Sunday night as the winner of a $1,000 essay contest sponsored by the President's Committee on the Employment of the Handicapped.

She is 18-year-old Marilyn Dautrich, a senior at Granite High School in Salt Lake City.

A Lincoln, Neb., entrant, Robert Dennis Tucker, won $200 for his fifth-place essay.

Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz will present the $1,000 first prize award to Miss Dautrich at the annual meeting of the committee in Washington April 29.

The prize money is contributed by the Disabled American Veterans.

Miss Dautrich wrote an essay about the success of her father, Claude W. Dautrich, and five other men in overcoming serious physical handicaps in their jobs and personal lives.

The contest, co-sponsored by the Governors' Committee on Employment of the Handicapped, is now in its 17th year.

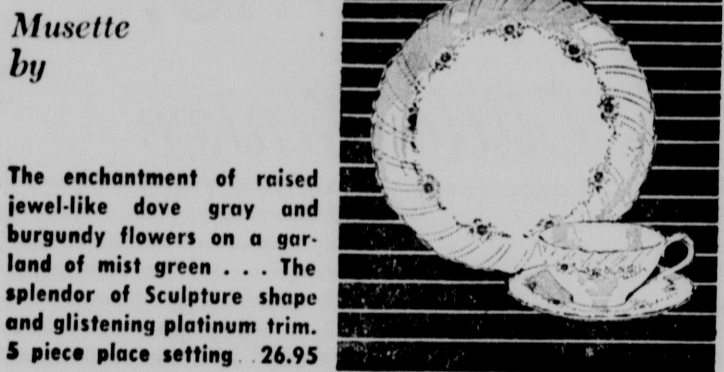

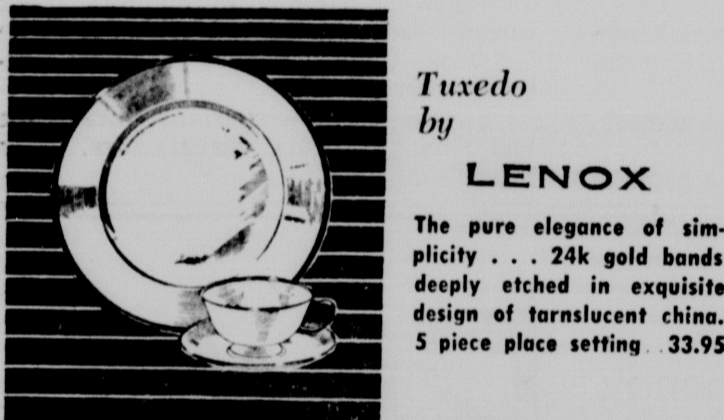

Other prize winners announced are Anita Kenison of Iola, Kan., second place, who will receive $600; Woody Jenkins, Baton Rouge, La., third, $400; Melody Jean Smith, Reno, Nev., fourth, $300; and Tucker. They also will attend the April 29 meeting of the President's committee to receive their awards.

The cost of transportation and expenses of the five winners to Washington will be contributed by the AFL-CIO state federations and councils in their respective states.

Herman Wouk's new novel, perhaps the most entertaining he has written, is an ironic comedy of tropical adventures, misadventures, and love affairs. A middle-aged New Yorker suddenly finds his glittering Manhattan life empty, boring and unbearable... this is the hilarious tale of his adventures when he chucks it all to buy a hotel on the Island of Amerigo in the Caribbean Sea.

imperial guard standing 40 to 50 yards away opened fire with his tommy gun.

The shah's bodyguards rushed the ruler into the building, and into his office on the ground floor. The conscript charged forward into the entrance of the building, firing as he went. As the fatally wounded guards fell, they brought down and killed the assailant with their own fire.

Details as reported Sunday differed considerably from an account Saturday, a few hours after the shooting. That version said the affray was the result of a private argument between two members of the shah's imperial guard, and that only one soldier was killed.

Rumors Run Rife

Because of apparent government reticence, Tehran was full of rumors.

The incident occurred less than three months after the assassination of Premier Hassan Ali Mansour by a Moslem religious reactionary.

The shah himself was wounded in a communist assassination plot in 1947. A gunman disguised as a photographer pulled a pistol from his camera case during a ceremony at Tehran University and fired three shots. One bullet brushed the shah's lip, one went through his cap, the third pierced the padding of his uniform shoulder.

WRECKAGE OF PLANE... strewn over mountain top.

Souvenirs Litter Plane Crash Site

Damascus, Syria (AP)—Search parties Sunday toiled to the peak of 1,800-foot Mt. Wadi El Kanissat where a Royal Jordanian Airlines plane crashed Saturday, killing all 54 persons aboard.

They found only charred wreckage and began bringing the bodies down.

The plane, on a flight from Beirut, Lebanon, to Cairo via Amman, Jordan, carried 50 tourists—47 Belgian, two Dutch and one Swiss. There also were four Jordanian crew members aboard.

The mountain where the plane crashed is near the Syrian-Lebanese border.

Reporters who accompanied the investigating team, headed by Jordan's Minister of Communications Aly Dajani and Syria's Director of Civil Aviation Yumni Dumluji, saw pathetic souvenirs of the travelers' sojourn in the Middle East. There were inlaid brass trays, mosaic boxes and other such objects scattered about.

Bodies were carried to the foot of the mountain where they were taken by ambulance to the National Hospital morgue in Damascus.

The investigating team has not yet found the reason for the crash.

Nebraskans To March For Liberty Amendment

Nebraska members of the Liberty Amendment Committee will participate in a national effort, "Tax Freedom Week," starting Monday, according to Mrs. Hal Berger of Omaha, vice chairman of the state organization.

The Political periodical "The Independent American" had reported that "promoters of the Liberty Amendment in cooperation with the John Birch Society are making plans to join together in a movement to be known as 'Operation Street Scene'."

Mrs. Berger confirmed the report that her group will follow the national pattern—to march in front of the Internal Revenue Office in Omaha and pass out leaflets asking abolition of federal income taxes.

She did not confirm the John Birch Society's participation in Nebraska, but she left the door open to "anyone who doesn't like to pay taxes, regardless of race, color or creed" to march with her organization.

Plans for the Omaha protest are not yet organized, but "we plan to do something in front of the IRS building," she said.

The pamphlets the Los Angeles-based organization supplies its marchers challenges people "to restrain runaway federal bureaucracy," to preserve the sovereignty of states, and to preserve the freedoms in the "original Constitution."

According to the pamphlets, abolition of federal income tax will accomplish these aims. It contends that without federal taxes workers' actual pay will be increased and "job security" and "a flourishing economy" will result.

Postmasters Gather Here For Meeting

Nebraska's postmasters began gathering in Lincoln Saturday and Sunday some 300 strong for their annual convention.

Sunday's activities included a nine-hole golf tournament at Holmes Park—twenty-three postmasters entered and a reception Sunday night for Charles H. Ryan, deputy Assistant postmaster general.

Monday will see the postmasters registering, from 7 a.m. to 4 p.m., conducting business meetings and finishing the day with a social event.

Tuesday morning at 9 the postmasters will elect new officers. The convention will be closed with a banquet and dance Tuesday evening.

NEWS of the suburban areas

Unloose the sail, mates because we are heading out to sea."

You don't need to bring all your gear, because it's not going to be a long voyage. Actually, we're only going out to Eastridge and Country Club Terrace and back.

EASTRIDGE

The Commodore Mariners of the Eastridge Presbyterian Church sailed right over to Malone Community Center Friday night and dropped anchor to share their "sea rations" at a covered dish supper with couples from the Malone community.

Actually, the "sea rations" would have turned anyone's appetite on, whether sea sick or not, for there was quite a variety of excellent food spread out for sampling.

The Commodore Mariners is a nationwide club for married couples of the Presbyterian Church. In Lincoln, the club meets monthly for a supper and a program.

So Friday, as with all "old dogs from the sea," it was time to tell a yarn after supper. Most yarns don't have a grain of truth in them, but the ones told Friday night were "nothing but the truth."

Mr. and Mrs. Gene Williams, Skippers for the Commodore Mariners led off the tale. Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Parker, former Skippers who had abandoned ship to the Williams, came back on board to give devotions.

The sea crew gave the "land lover" a chance to add their two cents worth. The "land lovers" were the staff of the Malone Community Center and other persons involved in their program. They combined forces to inform the Mariners about what was taking place on dry land, that is, at the Malone Community Center.

The Mariners usually meet at the church. But once a year they have a progressive dinner where appetizers are served at one home, salad at another, and so on, until the dessert at the church. One of the members of the club said, "You can eat more that way—traveling settles the food so there is room for more."

COUNTRY CLUB TERRACE

Mrs. Joseph L. Kaufman came back to Nebraska in time to enjoy the warm spring weather. But prior to this, she had spent a month enjoying the weather on the west coast.

Mrs. Kaufman didn't travel about just to take advantage of the best climate, but to visit her son and brothers. She left Nebraska on March 2 and headed for Klamath Falls, Ore., to visit her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Kaufman. From there, she went down the coast to San Francisco to spend some time at the home of her brother and his family, Dr. and Mrs. Norman Green. Going on to Los Angeles, Mrs. Kaufman was entertained by another brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Avrom Green, and family.

We leave the actual weather forecasting up to the weatherman but predict it will be sunny skies overhead for Mrs. Kaufman next spring as she hopes to go to Schweinfurt, Germany to see her son-in-law and daughter, Capt. and Mrs. Daniel Denenberg.

AUTUMN ceremony is planned

Of particular interest to Lincoln this morning is the announcement made by Mr. and Mrs. Walter Meisinger of the engagement of their daughter, Marlene Kay, to David Charles Larson, son of Mr. and Mrs. T. M. Larson of Salt Lake City.

The wedding will take place on Friday, Sept. 10. Miss Meisinger who, as a Stewardess for Frontier Airlines is based in Salt Lake City, is a former student at the University of Nebraska. PLANS late summer wedding

This morning Dr. and Mrs. Hugo A. Klint of Tucson, Ariz., announce the engagement of their daughter, Kathleen Yvonne, to William Gene Chaffin of Lincoln, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Chaffin of San Jose, Calif.

The wedding is planned for August, and will take place in Austin, Tex.

Miss Klint attended Trinity College in Chicago, and was graduated, with a degree in music education from the University of Arizona. She is a member of Sigma Alpha Iota, professional music sorority. Mr. Chaffin attended San Jose State College.

PEO Groups

The regular meeting of Chapter GD, PEO, will be held Thursday evening at the home of Mrs. Charles Roper, 4435 So. 43rd. Mrs. Richard Thompson will give the 7:30 o'clock program.

BETROTHED

The Rev. and Mrs. Kimber D. Johnson of Des Moines, Iowa, this morning announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Vernelda Louise, to Robert W. Bischoff, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph H. Bischoff of Keene, Tex.

Among Nebraskans who attended the recent Republican women's conference in Washington, D. C., were Mrs. Paul V. Armstrong, president of the Cornhusker Republican Women's Club, her daughter Nancy, and Mrs. Martha Smith, all of Lincoln. En route home, the trio visited former Elmwood residents, Mr. and Mrs. Don Gonzales, at Williamsburg, Va., where Mr. Gonzales is vice president in charge of public relations for Williamsburg.

ABBY it isn't worth the gamble

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I hope this gets printed because my husband reads your column and I haven't the nerve to tell him this. We have been married for 15 years and have a lovely family. My husband was engaged to someone else before he met me, but she married another man. Soon after, we met and fell in love. (At least, I fell in love with him.) Abby, I have a very strong feeling that my husband is still in love with this woman (or the memory of her). The best index to a man's feeling is his actions. And if he's good to you, gives you his whole pay check and hasn't seen the old flame, perhaps you are trying to solve a problem that doesn't exist.

45 and feel 80. He hasn't seen this other woman in all these years, so in his mind she is still the same. I have seen her recently, and she isn't. Do you think if I told him to go to see her it would help?

ALL CRIED OUT

DEAR ALL CRIED OUT: It isn't worth the gamble. How do you know your husband is still "in love" with this other woman (or the memory of her)? The best index to a man's feeling is his actions. And if he's good to you, gives you his whole pay check and hasn't seen the old flame, perhaps you are trying to solve a problem that doesn't exist.

DEAR ABBY: I am writing about your response to NO KEY IN MANHATTAN. The writer said that her employer advised her of her legal rights, and you replied, "Unless your employer is a lawyer, don't regard his word as 'law'." I think your sarcasm was pointless. Am I to understand by your remark that only a lawyer should know anything about law? Every tenant worth his salt knows his rights and his landlord's obligations.

NO LAWYER IN ANAHEIM

DEAR NO LAWYER: You are substantially correct: tenants and landlords should know their rights and obligations. But because the law is so complicated (and laws differ from state to state) the most reliable source of information in the event of a dispute is a competent lawyer. A man with a broken arm can't get a doctor fast enough. But a man with a broken contract resents shelling out for legal advice. I say, if one has a legal problem, hunt up a lawyer and pay him for what he knows.

Miss Sandra Kay Bridger, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur R. Bridger, became the bride of Richard D. Bowden, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bowden of Valentine, at a candlelight service solemnized Saturday evening, April 10. The lines of the service were read by the Rev. Dwight Ganzel at the Waverly Methodist Church.

Mrs. Cloyd Bucknell, the honor attendant, and the bridesmaids, Miss Arliss Bowden, Miss Betty Brooks and Mrs. Don Pankoke, wore taffeta frocks in pastel tones and carried carnations to match their costumes.

Serving as best man was Don Pankoke, and the ushers were Jerry Bush, Valentine; Richard Bridger, Jim Wittstruck, Gary Powell and Larry Bucknell.

White Chantilly lace was chosen by the bride for her wedding gown. Seed pearls and iridescent sequins accented the scalloped neckline of the long-sleeved basque, and the very full skirt continued into a whisper train. A jeweled crown held her bouffant veil of illusion, and white feathered carnations and pink sweetheart roses fashioned her bouquet.

Mr. and Mrs. Bowden will make their home in Lincoln.

At a candlelight service solemnized Sunday evening, April 11, at the First Methodist Church in Geneva, Miss Mary Jane Tatro of Lincoln, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Duane Tatro, Geneva, became the bride of L. George Cantrell, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard G. Cantrell, Fairmont. Dr. Everett E. Jackman read the lines of the ceremony.

Wearing slim frocks of avocado green linen were Mrs. Robert Cooper, Lincoln, the matron of honor; and the bridesmaids, Miss Eileen Cantrell, sister of the bridegroom, and Mrs. Larry Nichols, Lincoln.

Larry Murray, Lincoln, served as best man, and the groomsmen were Larry Kelch and Jim Cantrell, brother of the bridegroom.

The bride chose white peau de soie for her wedding gown. The long-sleeved bodice was patterned with re-embroidered Alencon lace, and the lace trim was repeated on the bell skirt and also bordered the panel train which extended to chapel length. Her illusion veil was held by a jeweled coronet, and she carried a cascade of white roses centered with a white orchid.

The couple will reside in San Leandro, Calif.

Entertaining in pre-nuptial courtesy to Miss Linda Kingston Sunday afternoon, April 4, were Mrs. Harvey Hartwig, Mrs. Calvin Hartwig and Mrs. Lyle Hartwig, who were hostesses to 20 guests at the home of Mrs. Blanche Hartwig in Cortland. The soon-to-be bride was presented a miscellaneous shower.

Miss Kingston, whose marriage to Pat Markussen will be solemnized on Saturday, April 17, also was honored on Friday evening, April 2, when Miss Janice Barton was a shower hostess at her home.

Also included among recent courtesies was the party given by the Sunday School teachers and members of the Challengers Circle of the Arcadia Methodist Church. Seventy guests were invited to the shower which was held in the church parlors.

The wedding of Miss Kingston, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Orin W. Kingston of Arcadia, and Mr. Markussen will take place at a 7 o'clock evening service to be solemnized at the Arcadia Methodist Church.

4♠	4♠	Dble.	Pass
5♠	Pass	5♦	Dble

Opening lead — king of spades.

This astonishing hand occurred in the match between France and the United States during the First World Bridge Olympiad played in Turin in 1960.

When an American pair held the North-South cards, the bidding went as shown. The double of one spade was conventional. It was not a business double; it showed a hand of moderate strength with length in hearts as well. From then on, the bidding was fairly normal, even if the final result was not.

West led a spade and continued with a spade, which South ruffed. Declarer played the ace of diamonds, West, showing out, and then finessed the queen of hearts. He next led two rounds of clubs, East ruffing the second one.

East returned a spade, ruffed in the closed hand. South now played a heart, allowing West to win with the jack, but East still had to make two trump tricks and the contract went down three—800 points.

At the second table, where a French pair held the North-South cards, the bidding went:

South	West	North	East
1♦	1♠	2♥	3♠
4♣	4♣	5♦	Dble.

The bidding was not as lengthy, but the same unfortunate contract was reached.

Declarer ruffed the second round of spades, led a club to the jack, and played the queen of diamonds, covered by the king and ace. He then finessed the queen of hearts, cashed the ace, and ruffed a heart.

When he now played a club, East ruffed, cashed the jack of diamonds, continued with a spade, and the outcome was that this South also went down three to tie the result at the first table.

All the time, either South player could have bid and made five clubs for plus 600, instead of going down 800!

Church Weddings

Miss Sandra Kay Bridger, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur R. Bridger, became the bride of Richard D. Bowden, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bowden of Valentine, at a candlelight service solemnized Saturday evening, April 10. The lines of the service were read by the Rev. Dwight Ganzel at the Waverly Methodist Church.

Mrs. Cloyd Bucknell, the honor attendant, and the bridesmaids, Miss Arliss Bowden, Miss Betty Brooks and Mrs. Don Pankoke, wore taffeta frocks in pastel tones and carried carnations to match their costumes.

Serving as best man was Don Pankoke, and the ushers were Jerry Bush, Valentine; Richard Bridger, Jim Wittstruck, Gary Powell and Larry Bucknell.

White Chantilly lace was chosen by the bride for her wedding gown. Seed pearls and iridescent sequins accented the scalloped neckline of the long-sleeved basque, and the very full skirt continued into a whisper train. A jeweled crown held her bouffant veil of illusion, and white feathered carnations and pink sweetheart roses fashioned her bouquet.

Mr. and Mrs. Bowden will make their home in Lincoln.

Senator Bauer's Long Day Typical—But He's Not

Bauer's legislative day opens with prayer.

In committee, Bauer confers with Revenue chairman Jules Burbach.

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

A day in the life of a state senator is a crowded combination of debate and decision, politics and pressure, meetings and motion.

Hal Bauer, Lincoln's new senator from the new 28th District, will arise this morning at 7 to begin another long day of legislative duties.

On the way to the Statehouse, he may stop briefly at his law office, but he will be in the legislative chamber shortly after 8 a.m. to begin dictation and answer correspondence.

The Unicameral is generally in session from 9 a.m. to noon, then senators adjourn for what is almost always a working luncheon. Committee sessions begin at 2 p.m., and generally run at least until 5 p.m.

Bauer will normally meet with constituents, other senators, lobbyists or groups of interested citizens after committee meetings, perhaps complete more dictation, then go to his law office to try to catch up with activities there.

More evenings than not, he and other lawmakers will have a working dinner on the schedule before Bauer returns home at night to his wife and two children.

The senator's schedule may be typical—but the senator is not. Bauer is chief sponsor of what may well be the most important bill of the 1965 session, the state income tax proposal. He has been particularly active for a freshman senator, and played a major role in shaping the measure which boosted the state gasoline tax and allocated 80% of the revenue to municipalities for their street needs.

Senator hears constituent's views.

A push of the button records Bauer's vote on bill.

WHO TOLD SAM GORDY to take his prescription to Walgreens?

Mrs. Gordy did.

Because when Sam's doctor told him he'd probably be taking the same prescription for some time, Mrs. Gordy "shopped" several places (like a good wife would) to determine just who had the lowest price on that prescription. She found it at Walgreens. Along with high professional standards and Walgreens friendly kind of service.

Sam? He's doing fine.

With a woman like Mrs. Gordy on his side, why shouldn't he.

NICKLAUS CAPTURES MASTERS

...Powerful Golden Bear's Record 271 Leaves Challengers Far Behind

Augusta, Ga. (P)—Jack Nicklaus, blond young goliath with awesome power, won his second Masters title Sunday by nine shots with a record-shattering 17-under-par 271 and established himself firmly as golf's new superstar.

It was a slaughter. The 210-ound Golden Bear, a comparative babe of 25, climaxed one of the game's great all-time performances with a final round 69 and an unprecedented margin over his two fellow members of the Big Three, Arnold Palmer and Gary Player.

After the powerful Nicklaus once started his charge at the halfway point, the others never had a chance. The world's finest golfers and the massive, demanding Augusta National course—6,980 yards of frustration and elusive par 72—were left numbed by the impact of the big Columbus, Ohio Boy's assault.

Nicklaus' rounds of 67-71-64-69—271 cracked by three shots the record 274 which Ben Hogan set in 1953 and held proudly for a dozen years.

The previous largest winning margin in this tournament, a mushrooming spectacle that lures the world's best players, was seven strokes—the gap by which Dr. Cary Middlecoff captured the title in 1955.

On his closing round, Nicklaus had only one bogey—at the fourth hole, his first in a stretch of 29 holes—and four birdies. He missed other birdies by inches.

One of these came on the 520-yard 15th hole where two tremendous blows put him on the green, putting for an eagle. His first putt from 40 feet went six feet past. On the next try, the ball hit the back of the cup and curled away.

Big Jack refused to be disconcerted by this unlucky turn. He parred the short 16th easily and on the 400-yard 17th rifled his approach to within 18 inches for his final birdie.

By this time a large part of the gallery of 50,000 swarming over the picturesque course, was lining the fairway and hugging the green.

They let out a deafening roar and it was easy to see that courses were in for a new gallery menace—Jack's Pack, replacing the rampaging Arnie's Army.

This indeed may well be the start of the Nicklaus era, just as the game passed through periods in which Bob Jones, Ben Hogan and Arnold Palmer dominated.

Jones, the immortal Grand Slammer who gave birth to the Masters, was a spectator and Hogan and Palmer were in the badly beaten field of the world's finest shot-makers.

Nicklaus stood over them all like a colossus—throwing the shadow of a man that may rule the game for a decade or two to come.

At 25, he already has won more major crowns—two Masters, including his first in 1963; the U.S. Open, the PGA and the National Amateur twice before he turned pro.

Other golfers not even Jones, Hogan or Palmer, ever won so much at such a young age.

"It is frightening to think what this boy may do in the years to come," commented Byron Nelson, one of the game's greats. "He hasn't matured yet. He has 10 years to go before he reaches his peak."

Of the 91 players who began last Thursday, only 10 were able to break par and none of them gave it the walloping that Nicklaus administered.

Palmer, the defending champion and four-time winner, never got his charge underway and finished with a 70. Player, the little South African, scrambled to a 73.

Player had three consecutive bogies on the front nine and lost three strokes with a bogey at the 11th and double bogey at the 12th, where he dumped his tee shot into the water at the left.

Palmer had a bogey at the fifth, consecutive birdies at the eighth and ninth, another at the 13th and then parred in the rest of the way.

It was a good round, but lacked the sensational trademark of Palmer's traditional surge.

Mason Rudolph shot a par 72 for 283 and fourth money. Dan Sikes, 34-year-old campaigner from Jacksonville, Fla., had a final 75 for 285 and fifth.

Littler, former U.S. Open champion, shot a 74 to tie for sixth at 286 with Spain's Ramon Sota, who closed with par 72.

They were followed by Tommy Bolt and Frank Beard, tied at 287.

Nobody else was able to crack par.

Nelson finished ahead of his old rival, Hogan, by shooting a 74 for 290. Hogan also had a 74 for 291.

Nicklaus' last round lacked the perfection of his record-tying 64 on Saturday but gave proof that this bull-strong young man can tear a golf course apart with only half an effort.

Big Jack started with a birdie on the first hole, sinking a putt of eight feet and added a second at the par 3 fourth from 12 feet.

He overshot the green on the fifth, chipped back to within six feet and missed for his lone bogey in two days. He proceeded to play steady par until the 12th, where he rolled in a putt of 18 feet. He barely missed a bird at the 15th and almost knocked down the flag with a great approach at No. 17.

Excitement was high when Nicklaus, wearing a sloppy brimmed hat, waddled to the 18th after driving into the gallery.

His recovery was 75 feet from the pin but he chipped within six inches and saved his par.

It was the first tournament victory of the year for Nicklaus, who beat out Palmer last year for money winning honors.

The young Ohioan has everything going for him — strength, youth and confidence.

With bull-like shoulders and heavy hips, he hits the ball higher and farther than any golfer who ever lived. A slow, meticulous player of the Hogan stripe, he is a superb iron player and putter.

If he has one fault, it is his chipping. On three holes Sunday, he made bad chips which cost him birdies.

Some say that Nicklaus' career may be cut short by his phenomenal early success—that he may lose his enthusiasm and hunger.

"Never," says the young giant. "Never until I prove I'm the best player in the world."

Nicklaus displays joy . . .

. . . Palmer in trouble.

Hungarian Wins Men's Singles At Nice Tournament

Nice, France (AP)—Hungarian Istvan Gulyas beat Milan Holec of Czechoslovakia 6-0, 6-1, 7-5 Sunday in the finals of the Nice International Lawn Tennis Club Tournament.

Elga Schultze of Germany beat Bill Blackman of Australia, 7-5, 6-2, in the women's finals.

In the men's doubles finals, Bob Hewitt and Ken Fletcher of Australia, defeated Roger Dowdeswell of Rhodesia and Tom Okker of Holland 6-1, 6-2, 6-3.

will keep them on the sidelines for a few days at least as the result of the first serious head-knocking session of the spring drills at NU.

The injury list included right halfback Tom Brinkworth (possible fractured leg), linebacker Mike Kennedy (smashed thumb), left tackle Bob Taucher (strained knee), fullback Mike Worley (strained knee), left end Don Delaney (ankle injury) and left halfback Ted Vactor (knee injury).

"They hit real well for the first time of the season," head coach Bob Devaney observed after the three-hour session. "The first offensive unit looked good on offense, but bad on defense and the first defensive unit looked good on defense, but bad on offense."

However, the Husker coach noted there were some exceptions to the generalization.

"Allers (linebacker LaVerne Allers) did a good job on defense for the first offensive unit," Devaney pointed out.

The top offensive unit, quarterbacked by Bob Churchich, moved quickly downfield to score four plays after starting the scrimmage.

Churchich hit Freeman White with a 35-yard pass play to open the scrimmage and three plays later pitched out to Ron Kirkland who skirted right end for the touchdown from 15 yards away.

"Churchich did a good job of passing and he also ran the team well," Devaney noted.

The switch of White with Tony Jeter, making White the split end also produced desirable results with Churchich finding the big end frequently on pass plays against a weaker defensive unit.

"We think the switch is working out for us," Devaney said. "Jeter did a good job of blocking today, especially on downfield blocks."

While Churchich's passing was sharp and effective, the other NU quarterbacks had their ups and downs and were frequently off-target with their pass attempts.

Two of the four touchdowns came on pass interceptions with linebacker Lynn Sinkbeil snaring one for a TD and grabbing another that stopped a drive. Al Fierro pirated a pass late in the scrimmage and returned it for a touchdown.

The fourth touchdown of the afternoon came on a 60-yard run down the west sideline by Paul Critchlow.

Fullback Pete Tatman ran well with the No. 1 offensive unit and fullback Mike Worley also gained good chunks of yardage before suffering the knee injury.

Devaney also credited sophomore right halfback Mueller with "doing a good job, both on offense and defense."

Defensive standouts in the fourth practice session of the spring drills were Allers, Sinkbeil, Kennedy, linebacker Barry Alvarez, Jim McCord and Taucher.

The NU coaching staff has made no personnel shifts in the first four workouts, but Devaney indicated switches may be made this week.

One such switch would move Kirkland and Tatman to the defensive unit and put Kaye Carstens and Bill Johnson with the top offensive squad.

Strong winds and wet tracks have hindered most early season track efforts, but you won't find many complaints from the hurdlers in Nebraska high school ranks.

They've used the brisk winds to log some impressive marks, including efforts by Omaha Central's Joe Orduna and Scottsbluff's John Simmons which rank as the second-fastest ever run in the state.

Orduna, who had a :14.9 mark as a sophomore last year, made his first trip over the 120-yard highs in the Midland Relays and logged a :14.4.

Simmons, who had a :19.9 effort in the lows as a junior last year, streaked to a :19.1 effort on a straightaway course at the Chadron Invitational Saturday.

has had better times in the hurdle events. He had a wind-aided :14.2 in the highs and a :19.0 in the lows five years ago and his marks haven't been seriously threatened until now.

Simmons also had a :14.7 in the highs Saturday, which equaled the best mark in the state last season.

But he's in fourth place on the early chart behind Orduna, Central's Jim Hunter and Chadron's Ben Roberts. Hunter and Roberts each have :14.6 clockings.

Wind has played havoc with the longer races and almost all of the leading marks in the mile run were recorded during the indoor season.

Scottsbluff's Doug Hollinger became the first to crack :2.20 in the 220 as he logged a :21.9 at Chadron. The Holdrege transfer also moved into a tie for second place in the 100 at :10.1.

The leader in the century is defending Class C sprint champion Bill Daiss of Grant, who has a :10.0.

Eleven runners are bracketed between :52 and :53 in the 440 with Grand Island's Larry Andersen, Bridgeport's Don Landgrin and Malcolm's Larry Forst heading the list.

Bayard's Chuck Satchell is well in front of the half-mileers with a 2:02.4 mark.

NICKLAUS CAPTURES MASTERS

...Powerful Golden Bear's Record 271 Leaves Challengers Far Behind

Augusta, Ga. (AP)—Jack Nicklaus, blond young goliath with awesome power, won his second Masters title Sunday by nine shots with a record-shattering 17-under-par 271 and established himself firmly as golf's new superstar.

It was a slaughter. The 210-pound Golden Bear, a comparative babe of 25, climaxed one of the game's great all-time performances with a final round 69 and an unprecedented margin over his two fellow members of the Big Three, Arnold Palmer and Gary Player.

After the powerful Nicklaus once started his charge at the halfway point, the others never had a chance. The world's finest golfers and the massive, deman-

ing Augusta National course—6,980 yards of frustration and elusive par 72—were left numbed by the impact of the big Columbus, Ohio Boy's assault.

Nicklaus' rounds of 67-71-64-69—271 cracked by three shots the record 274 which Ben Hogan set in 1953 and held proudly for a dozen years.

The previous largest winning margin in this tournament, a mushrooming spectacle that lures the world's best players, was seven strokes—the gap by which Dr. Cary Middlecoff captured the title in 1955.

On his closing round, Nicklaus had only one bogey—at the fourth hole, his first in a stretch of 29 holes—and four birdies. He missed other birdies by inches.

One of these came on the 520-yard 15th hole where two tremendous blows put him on the green, putting for an eagle. His first putt from 40 feet went six feet past. On the next try, the ball hit the back of the cup and curled away.

Big Jack refused to be disconcerted by this unlucky turn. He parred the short 16th easily and on the 400-yard 17th rifled his approach to within 18 inches for his final birdie.

By this time a large part of the gallery of 50,000 swarming over the picturesque course, was lining the fairway and hugging the green.

They let out a deafening roar and it was easy to see that courses were in for a new gallery menace—Jack's Pack, replacing the rampaging Arnie's Army.

This indeed may well be the start of the Nicklaus era, just as the game passed through periods in which Ben Jones, Ben Hogan and Arnold Palmer dominated.

Jones, the immortal Grand Slamner who gave birth to the Masters, was a spectator and Hogan and Palmer were in the badly beaten field of the world's finest shot-makers.

Nicklaus stood over them all like a colossus—throwing the shadow of a man that may rule the game for a decade or two to come.

At 25, he already has won more major crowns—two Masters, including his first in 1963; the U.S. Open, the PGA and the National Amateur twice before he turned pro.

Other golfers not even Jones, Hogan or Palmer, ever won so much at such a young age.

"It is frightening to think what this boy may do in the years to come," commented Byron Nelson, one of the game's greats. "He hasn't matured yet. He has 10 years to go before he reaches his peak."

Of the 91 players who began last Thursday, only 10 were able to break par and none of them gave it the walloping that Nicklaus administered.

Palmer, the defending champion and four-time winner, never got his charge underway and finished with a 70. Player, the little South African, scrambled to a 73.

Player had three consecutive bogies on the front nine and lost three strokes with a bogey at the 11th and double bogey at the 12th, where he dumped his tee shot into the water at the left.

Palmer had a bogey at the fifth, consecutive birdies at the eighth and ninth, another at the 13th and then parred in the rest of the way.

It was a good round, but lacked the sensational trademark of Palmer's traditional surge.

Mason Rudolph shot a par 72 for 283 and fourth money. Dan Sikes, 34-year-old campaigner from Jacksonville, Fla., had a final 75 for 285 and fifth.

Littler, former U.S. Open champion, shot a 74 to tie for sixth at 286 with Spain's Ramon Sota, who closed with par 72.

They were followed by Tommy Bolt and Frank Beard, tied at 287.

Nobody else was able to crack par.

Nelson finished ahead of his old rival, Hogan, by shooting a 74 for 290. Hogan also had a 74 for 291.

Nicklaus' last round lacked the perfection of his record-tying 64 on Saturday but gave proof that this bull-strong young man can tear a golf course apart with only half an effort.

Big Jack started with a birdie on the first hole, sinking a putt of eight feet and added a second at the par 3 fourth from 12 feet.

He overshot the green on the fifth, chipped back to within six feet and missed for his lone bogey in two days.

He proceeded to play steady par until the 12th, where he rolled in a putt of 18 feet. He barely missed a bird at the 15th and almost knocked down the flag with a great approach at No. 17.

Excitement was high when Nicklaus, wearing a sloppy brimmed hat, waddled to the 18th after driving into the gallery.

His recovery was 75 feet from the pin but he chipped within six inches and saved his par.

It was the first tournament victory of the year for Nicklaus, who beat out Palmer last year for money winning honors.

The young Ohioan has everything going for him — strength, youth and confidence.

With bull-like shoulders and heavy hips, he hits the ball higher and farther than any golfer who ever lived. A slow, meticulous player of the Hogan stripe, he is a superb iron player and putter.

If he has one fault, it is his chipping. On three holes Sunday, he made bad chips which cost him birdies.

Some say that Nicklaus' career may be cut short by his phenomenal early success—that he may lose his enthusiasm and hunger.

"Never," says the young giant. "Never until I prove I'm the best player in the world."

Nicklaus displays joy . . .

. . . Palmer in trouble.

Hungarian Wins Men's Singles At Nice Tournament

Nice, France (AP)—Hungarian Istvan Gulyas beat Milan Holecak of Czechoslovakia 6-0, 6-1, 7-5 Sunday in the finals of the Nice International Lawn Tennis Club Tournament.

Elga Schultze of Germany beat Jill Blackman of Australia, 7-5, 6-2, in the women's finals.

In the men's doubles finals, Bob Hewitt and Ken Fletcher of Australia, defeated Roger Dowdeswell of Rhodesia and Tom Okker of Holland 6-1, 6-3, 6-3.

The fourth touchdown of the afternoon came on a 60-yard run down the west sideline by Paul Critchlow.

Fullback Pete Tatman ran well with the No. 1 offensive unit and fullback Mike Worley also gained good chunks of yardage before suffering the knee injury.

Devaney also credited sophomore right halfback Mueller with "doing a good job, both on offense and defense."

Defensive standouts in the fourth practice session of the spring drills were Allers, Sinkbeil, Kennedy, linebacker Barry Alvarez, Jim McCord and Taucher.

The NU coaching staff has made no personnel shifts in the first four workouts, but Devaney indicated switches may be made this week.

One such switch would move Kirkland and Tatman to the defensive unit and put Kaye Carstens and Bill Johnson with the top offensive squad.

However, the Husker coach noted there were some exceptions to the generalization.

"Allers (linebacker) LaVerne Allers) did a good job on defense for the first offensive unit," Devaney pointed out.

The top offensive unit, quarterbacked by Bob Churchich, moved quickly downfield to score four plays after starting the scrimmage.

Churchich hit Freeman White with a 35-yard pass play to open the scrimmage and three plays later pitched out to Ron Kirkland who skirted right end for the touchdown from 15 yards away.

"Churchich did a good job of passing and he also ran the team well," Devaney noted.

The switch of White with Tony Jeter, making White the split end also produced desirable results with Churchich finding the big end frequently on pass plays against a weaker defensive unit.

"We think the switch is working out for us," Devaney said. "Jeter did a good job of blocking today, especially on downfield blocks."

While Churchich's passing was sharp and effective, the other NU quarterbacks had their ups and downs and were frequently off-target with their pass attempts.

Two of the four touchdowns came on pass interceptions with linebacker Lynn Sinkbeil snaring one for a TD and grabbing another that stopped a drive. Al Fierro pirated a pass late in the scrimmage and returned it for a touchdown.

While Churchich's passing was sharp and effective, the other NU quarterbacks had their ups and downs and were frequently off-target with their pass attempts.

Two of the four touchdowns came on pass interceptions with linebacker Lynn Sinkbeil snaring one for a TD and grabbing another that stopped a drive. Al Fierro pirated a pass late in the scrimmage and returned it for a touchdown.

The fourth touchdown of the afternoon came on a 60-yard run down the west sideline by Paul Critchlow.

Fullback Pete Tatman ran well with the No. 1 offensive unit and fullback Mike Worley also gained good chunks of yardage before suffering the knee injury.

Devaney also credited sophomore right halfback Mueller with "doing a good job, both on offense and defense."

Defensive standouts in the fourth practice session of the spring drills were Allers, Sinkbeil, Kennedy, linebacker Barry Alvarez, Jim McCord and Taucher.

The NU coaching staff has made no personnel shifts in the first four workouts, but Devaney indicated switches may be made this week.

Bostons' Vets Help Stall 76ers' Drive

... NOW LEAD EASTERN SERIES, 3-2

Boston — Shot-blocking Bill Russell and shotmaker Sam Jones powered Boston past stubborn Philadelphia 114-108 Sunday into a 3-2 lead in their National Basketball Association playoff series.

The best-of-7 Eastern Division finals, in which the Celtics seek a ninth straight crown, continues Tuesday night at Philadelphia.

Russell, who brought the blocked shot to the game, gave "author" Wilt Chamberlain some schooling in the art of defense while Sam Jones pumped in 29 points. Veteran cornerman Tommy Heinsohn added 24.

Although 76ers' starting guard Al Bianchi was disqualified before the half, the visitors refused to wilt in the face of the Boston fast break until the late stages. Bianchi drew automatic ejection when he got two technical fouls in the same ranting outburst.

Lakers Top Baltimore, By 120-112

Los Angeles — Los Angeles outmuscled Baltimore on the offensive and defensive boards to whip the Bullets 120-112 Sunday night and take a 3-2 lead in the National Basketball Association's Western Division final playoffs.

The Bullets are the strongmen of the NBA, but Laker Coach Fred Schaus inserted a front line—made up mostly of substitutes—that held its own with the Easterners.

Back court star Jerry West of Los Angeles was another vital key to the crucial victory. For the fifth straight game in the series he scored more than 40 points. He connected for 43. In previous outings he sank 49, 52, 44 and 48.

After being held to just five points in the first period and 17 in the first half, he slammed through the Baltimore defense for 17 points in the third quarter to begin a Laker runaway.

Los Angeles' halftime advantage was 53-52. But at the start of the fourth quarter the Lakers had climbed into a 86-77 bulge and, from then on, Baltimore never really got close.

'Virtually Unknown' Laguna New Lightweight Champion

Panama — Ismael Laguna, a 21-year-old Panamanian who turned pro four years ago, is the new world's lightweight boxing champion.

He dethroned Carlos Ortiz, a 28-year-old Puerto Rican from New York, with a 15-round split decision before 18,000 in Olympic Stadium Saturday night.

Ortiz had won the championship from Joe Brown in Las Vegas three years ago and had retained it in four previous title bouts. The last time was a year ago against Kenny Lane of Muskegon, Mich. in San Juan.

The speedy Laguna, virtually unknown outside Panama, survived Ortiz's bull-like charges with lightning return barrages that left Ortiz hanging on at the end.

Referee Jersey Joe Walcott of Camden, N.J., the former heavyweight champion, and Panamanian judge Ramon Inez voted for Laguna 143-132 and 149-137, respectively. Judge Ben Green of New York

Bostons' Vets Help Stall 76ers' Drive

... NOW LEAD EASTERN SERIES, 3-2

Boston (AP) — Shot-blocking Bill Russell and shotmaker Sam Jones powered Boston past stubborn Philadelphia 114-108 Sunday into a 3-2 lead in their National Basketball Association playoff series.

The best-of-7 Eastern Division finals, in which the Celtics seek a ninth straight crown, continues Tuesday night at Philadelphia.

Russell, who brought the blocked shot to the game, gave "author" Wilt Chamberlain some schooling in the art of defense while Sam Jones pumped in 29 points. Veteran cornerman Tommy Heinsohn added 24.

Although 76ers' starting guard Al Bianchi was disqualified just before the half, the visitors refused to wilt in the face of the Boston fast break until the late stages. Bianchi drew automatic ejection when he got two technical fouls in the same ranting outburst.

Lakers Top Baltimore, By 120-112

Los Angeles (AP) — Los Angeles outmuscled Baltimore on the offensive and defensive boards to whip the Bullets 120-112 Sunday night and take a 3-2 lead in the National Basketball Association's Western Division final playoffs.

The Bullets are the strongest of the NBA, but Laker Coach Fred Schaue inserted a front line—made up mostly of substitutes—that held its own with the Easterners.

Back court star Jerry West of Los Angeles was another vital key to the crucial victory. For the fifth straight game in the series he scored more than 40 points. He connected for 43. In previous outings he sank 49, 52, 44 and 48. After being held to just five points in the first period and 17 in the first half, he slammed through the Baltimore defense for 17 points in the third quarter to begin a Laker runaway.

Los Angeles' halftime advantage was 53-52. But at the start of the fourth quarter the Lakers had climbed into a 86-77 bulge and, from then on, Baltimore never really got close.

Senators Buy Green

Washington (AP) — The Washington Senators purchased pitcher Dallas Green on a conditional basis from the Philadelphia Phillies Sunday against referee Norm Druck-er.

Team mate Hal Greer pushed Bianchi halfway down the court in a successful effort to keep him from charging Drucker.

Chamberlain scored 30 points and Greer 28 in the losing cause but the Celtics' defense kept the 76ers forwards fairly well in check.

In this latest NBA version of "There's No Place Like Home," the Celtics took the floor apparently bent on atoning for their overtime loss Tuesday night when they blew a four-point lead with just a few seconds left in regulation time.

Hampton, Ga. (AP)—A. J. Foyt, taking over from exhausted Marvin Panch on the 212th lap, outduelled Miami's Bobby Johns to win the sixth annual Atlanta 500 stock car race Sunday.

The Boston victory was accomplished despite a heavy impost of fouls, Russell operating with four from the opening minute of the second half.

'Virtually Unknown' Laguna New Lightweight Champion

... DETHRONES 'SLUGGISH' ORTIZ

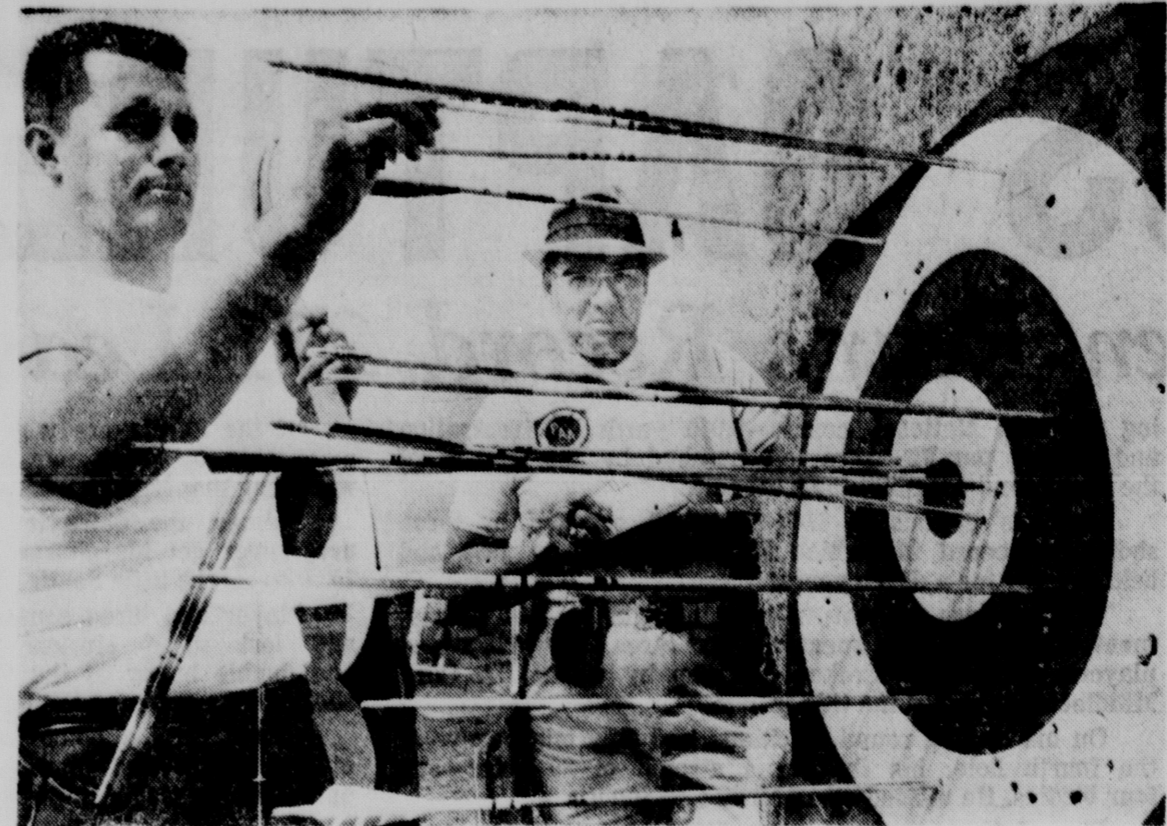

Panama (AP) — Ismael Laguna, a 21-year-old Panamanian who turned pro four years ago, is the new world's lightweight boxing champion.

He dethroned Carlos Ortiz, a 28-year-old Puerto Rican from New York, with a 15-round split decision before 18,000 in Olympic Stadium Saturday night.

Ortiz had won the championship from Joe Brown in Las Vegas three years ago and had retained it in four previous title bouts. The last time was a year ago against Kenny Lane of Muskegon, Mich. in San Juan.

The speedy Laguna, virtually unknown outside Panama, survived Ortiz's bull-like charges with lightning return barrages that left Ortiz hanging on at the end.

Referee Jersey Joe Walcott of Camden, N.J., the former heavyweight champion, and Panamanian judge Ramon Inez voted for Laguna 143-132 and 149-137, respectively. Judge Ben Green of New York

National Committee has brightened considerably the prospects that the six million GOP members who defected to President Johnson will return to their old party loyalties. There is now real unity among Republicans that the GOP should be controlled by moderates rather than Goldwater supporters. Even hard-core Goldwaterites think more of the Republican Party with its new look.

When asked if they would follow Goldwater leaders in a move out of the GOP to set up a new political movement, those who voted for the former Arizona senator say, by over 6 to 1, they would stick with the Republican Party.

Those who would take a walk out of the GOP would be more than offset by Republicans who would return to fold.

A special cross-section, representing all registered Republicans, all who say they are independents and those Democrats who voted for Goldwater—totaling 52% of the electorate—was asked a series of questions designed to find preferences on the direction of the GOP in 1965. Certainly if the Republican Party is to make a comeback in 1966 and in 1968, it must find the vote among this 52%.

This special cross-section was asked: "Despite his defeat last November, do you think Barry Goldwater and his supporters should control the Republican Party, or do you think the party should be controlled mostly by men with more moderate views?"

A clear majority of all possible groups who constitute the key targets for Republican efforts now prefers the moderate course for the GOP. The South, where the Republican candidate did best, along with the West, represent the strongest pockets of Goldwater strength. The pivotal independent voters and Republicans who voted for President Johnson are most adamant about seeing clear-cut moderate control.

To some degree, Ray Bliss' take-over has mollified some of the defectors from last November. This was evident in another question put to the special cross-section:

cided that the Goldwater supporters should not control the Republican National Committee. Does this make you feel like supporting the Republican Party more in the future, less or doesn't it make much difference?"

These results yield a rather clear estimate of just what the recent change to a new national chairman has meant to Republican fortunes. Among the more internationalist-minded, pro-civil rights oriented Republicans in the East, the shift in high command has enhanced confidence in the party. But among segregationist-minded Democrats in the deep South, a loss of confidence is the net result.

In many ways, the difference among Northern moderates and Southern conservatives points up the choice the Republican Party must make in its efforts to come back as a national political power approximating a majority. On the basis of these figures alone, the GOP appears to have gained about 2.5 million net supporters by taking control of the National Committee out of the hands of the Goldwater backers.

Highly significant is the additional fact that the rank and file feels that all differences should be resolved within the party. Asked specifically how they would react if Goldwater backers "would decide to leave the Republican Party and set up a separate political group" only 4% of the American electorate, or less than 3 million people, indicated they would support such an organization.

Many Republicans who defected to Johnson, on the other hand, would find a GOP without Goldwaterites a good reason to return to the Republican fold in massive numbers. Their response indicates that they are looking for a break from the recent Goldwater past on the part of the new party leadership.

National Committee has brightened considerably the prospects that the six million Goldwater members who defected to President Johnson will return to their old party loyalties. There is now real unity among Republicans that the GOP should be controlled by moderates rather than Goldwater supporters. Even hard-core Goldwaterites think more of the Republican Party with its new look.

When asked if they would follow Goldwater leaders in a move out of the GOP to set up a new political movement, those who voted for the former Arizona senator say, by over 6 to 1, they would stick with the Republican Party.

Those who would take a walk out of the GOP would be more than offset by Republicans who would return to fold.

A special cross-section, representing all registered Republicans, all who say they are independents and those Democrats who voted for Goldwater—totaling 52% of the electorate—was asked a series of questions designed to find preferences on the direction of the GOP in 1965. Certainly if the Republican Party is to make a comeback in 1966 and in 1968, it must find the vote among this 52%.

This special cross-section was asked: "Despite his defeat last November, do you think Barry Goldwater and his supporters should control the Republican Party, or do you think the party should be controlled mostly by men with more moderate views?"

A clear majority of all possible groups who constitute the key targets for Republican efforts now prefers the moderate course for the GOP. The South, where the Republican candidate did best, along with the West, represent the strongest pockets of Goldwater strength. The pivotal independent voters and Republicans who voted for President Johnson are most adamant about seeing clear-cut moderate control.

To some degree, Ray Bliss' take-over has mollified some of the defectors from last November. This was evident in another question put to the special cross-section: "The Republicans have decided that the Goldwater supporters should not control the Republican National Committee. Does this make you feel like supporting the Republican Party more in the future, less or doesn't it make much difference?"

Highly significant is the additional fact that the rank and file feels that all differences should be resolved within the party. Asked specifically how they would react if Goldwater backers "would decide to leave the Republican Party and set up a separate political group" only 4% of the American electorate, or less than 3 million people, indicated they would support such an organization.

Many Republicans who defected to Johnson, on the other hand, would find a GOP without Goldwaterites a good reason to return to the Republican fold in massive numbers. Their response indicates that they are looking for a break from the recent Goldwater past on the part of the new party leadership.

EVERYBODY'S MONEY:

Tax Policy Discourages Creation Of New Stock

By Myrle S. Rukeyser

Despite the unprecedented investor demand for common stocks, arbitrary federal and state income tax rulings discourage corporation reliance on getting new funds by creating and selling new stock.

In the decade from 1955 through 1964, discriminatory tax policy has altered the formation of the capital structures of corporations.

This arises from the arbitrary legalistic concept by bureaucracy as to the cost of capital. If capital funds are obtained through borrowing at the banks or through the sale of bonds and mortgages, then interest on such debt is a tax deductible expense. Interest is paid out of net income before taxes.

On the other hand, the tax law in effect takes the artificial view that there is no cost to capital obtained through the route of selling shares of stock to investors. Under the law, dividends on shares are not a tax deductible expense for corporations but can be paid only out of net income after taxes and past accumulations of such retained earnings.

As a result of this arbitrary official, legalistic attitude toward the cost of capital, those in charge of corporate finance have failed to take advantage of the great bull (rising) stock markets of the past decade, and have relied on debt, depreciation allowances, retained earnings and similar devices to supply capital needs. They have been wary about raising fresh capital through the sale to investors of new stock.

Stock Analysis

A New York Stock Exchange analysis discloses that in the decade under consideration corporations added more than half a trillion (more than $500 billion) of capital to replace worn out and obsolete equipment and to increase productivity. Of this vast amount, only $18 billion was raised through the sale of new stock to investors. About $300 billion came from outside capital raised. Of this, loans and mortgages amounted to $132 billion, with bond issues running about $50 billion.

The extent to which individuals and corporations are adjusting their affairs to the tax civilization in which we live is dramatized in the increasing reliance on generation of internal funds. About three fourths of the total corporate funds accumulated during these years were internal. Nearly half of this—almost $228 billion—represented reserves accumulated (and deducted from current net taxable corporate income) through depreciation allowances.

Another $85 billion constituted retained earnings—namely net profit which was not distributed to shareholders in dividends. This retention also has a tax implication, obviating the double taxation of both the corporate net income and the portion distributed as dividends. The undistributed earnings at the time are taxed only at the corporate rate. They add to the net worth, or book value of the shares owned by the stockholders, but there is no tax liability resultant therefrom until such time as the stockholder makes a sale and actually realizes a capital gain.

For larger stockholders, the capital gain tax rate is lower than the regular personal income tax rate. While stocks continue to be held by the owners, there is no individual tax liability incurred even though the accruals from retained earnings make the asset value behind each share of stock greater.

Despite Restriction

Despite the restricted raising of new capital through the stock route because of discriminatory tax policy, there has been in the decade a tripling of the number of listed shares outstanding. This increment reflects primarily the results of stock split and stock dividends, and secondarily the sale of shares on right to existing shareholders and of new listings.

In my opinion, corporate growth would be stimulated and corporate solvency would be heightened, if revisions in tax policy encouraged raising a much larger ratio of capital funds through the equity, or common stock route, instead of through debt financing through loans, mortgages and bond issues.

While the rental value of debt capital is a fixed charge which is payable during dips in the national economy as well as during booms. Stock financing is more flexible, and better enables corporations to survive not only general recessions but also obsolescence and technological changes in their own special fields.

Logically, all capital entails a cost, and the servicing of equity capital is legitimately a cost just as much as debt capital, but the tax law arbitrarily provides otherwise.

(Mr. Rukeyser will be pleased to receive inquiries from readers concerning their financial problems. Letters with self-addressed, stamped envelopes should be sent in care of The Lincoln Star. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column.)

Collectors Coins Taken In Burglary

Burglars who entered the Ray E. Sandovich residence, 3861 Sheridan, Saturday netted several hundred dollars worth of collectors coins, police said.

The burglars entered through a bedroom window pried open with a heavy tool. The burglars apparently ransacked the house until they found the coins.

Most of the valuable coins taken were of gold, police said.

Summer Camp For Air Guard Set In Lincoln

The Nebraska Air National Guard will undergo two weeks' summer training July 24-Aug. 7 at Lincoln instead of Alpena, Mich.

Col. Fred H. Bailey Jr. said the decision to remain at the home station was in part to enable the air group to thoroughly prepare its mobility procedures.

A 173rd Reconnaissance Squadron mission under the Tactical Air Command has "springboard" capability to move on extremely short notice to any spot on the globe.

Col. Bailey said ground crews and pilots have progressed to a high level of training and the summer training here could perfect mobility procedures for a key 1966 summer training assignment.

The 173rd flies the RF-84F jet, low-level reconnaissance aircraft. It is capable of in-air refueling.

This is National Peanut Week.

When George Washington said farewell to his officers in Fraumee's Tavern, Ensign Sam Whippoorwill was discovered drinking mulled wine and eating peanuts.

When asked the reason for such behavior on such an historic occasion, Sam stated: "Nobody ever ate only one peanut."

Valuable Items Stolen From Omaha Home

Omaha (AP)—A 61-year-old Omaha man, Walt Goodrich, suffered lacerations and bruises Sunday when his light plane crashed as he attempted a takeoff from his South Omaha airport.

Witnesses said the plane apparently was caught by a crosswind as it left the grass runway. The nose gear collapsed as the plane hit the runway again and the plane flipped over.

Several persons helped lift the craft and Goodrich crawled free. He was taken to a hospital for treatment.

There was no immediate estimate on the total loss.

Science Shrinks Piles New Way Without Surgery Stops Itch—Relieves Pain

New York, N. Y. (Special)—For the first time science has found a new healing substance with the astonishing ability to shrink hemorrhoids, stop itching, and relieve pain without surgery.

In one hemorrhoid case after another, "very striking improvement" was reported and verified by a doctor's observations.

Pain was relieved promptly. And, while gently relieving pain, actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place. And most amazing of all—this improvement was maintained in cases where a doctor's observations were continued over a period of many months!

In fact, results were so thorough that sufferers were able to make such astonishing statements as "Piles have ceased to be a problem!" And among these sufferers were a very wide variety of hemorrhoid conditions, some of 10 to 20 years' standing.

All this, without the use of narcotics, anesthetics or astringents of any kind. The secret is a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne®)—the discovery of a world-famous research institution. Already, Bio-Dyne is in wide use for healing injured tissue on all parts of the body. This new healing substance is offered in suppository or ointment form called Preparation H®. Ask for individually sealed convenient Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment with special applicator. Preparation H is sold at all drug counters.

All this, without the use of narcotics, anesthetics or astringents of any kind. The secret is a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne®)—the discovery of a world-famous research institution. Already, Bio-Dyne is in wide use for healing injured tissue on all parts of the body. This new healing substance is offered in suppository or ointment form called Preparation H®. Ask for individually sealed convenient Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment with special applicator. Preparation H is sold at all drug counters.

DID YOU KNOW THIS? IT'S A FACT:

The tradition of Thanksgiving being celebrated on a Thursday began in 1789.

A hurricane is a tropical storm with sustained winds in excess of 75 miles an hour.

Everyone in Great Britain can vote, excepting felons, aliens, lunatics and peers serving in the House of Lords. Women have had suffrage since 1919.

The Appalachian Trail, called "one of the seven wonders of the outdoorsman's world," winds 2,050 miles along the mountain backbone of the Eastern United States from Maine to Georgia.

If people consumed as much water as the average plant does in proportion to their weight, they would have to drink 10 quarts a day.

Here's How To Work It

One letter simply stands for another in this example. A is used for the three L's, Y for the two O's etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Here is a practical little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add three. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures gives you.
